New alert over 'passive' smoking

By Thomson Prentice, Science Correspondent Evidence that children who are exposed to cigarette smoke

at home are at greater risk of severe respiratory illness has been produced by researchers Their findings add to the growing view among health experts that "passive" smoking is harmful.

The latest study, by epidemiologists at Shanghai Medical University, has shown a clear dose response between household exposure to cigarette smoke and the hospital admission rate for respiratory illness in infants nnder 18 months of age.

The study, published in the latest issue of the British ratory illness among the 58

Medical Journal, involved 1,058 infants, of whom a total of 764 were from families which included smokers; in most cases the father smoked. and in no case was the mother a smoker.

Of the group, 184 were admitted to hospital at least once during the first 18 months of life, 100 of them for respiratory illness, and 84 for other conditions. Of the 100 baking 80 were from cracking. other conditions. Of the 100 habies, 80 were from smoking families, and in 58 cases the family member, most often the father, smoked more than 10 cigarettes a day.

infants was 1.80, almost twice for those from non-smoking The researchers point out that none of the mothers smoked, the habit among young women being rare in Shanghai. Hence, the possible adverse effects of maternal smoking during pregnancy were avoided, and the harmful effects of household exposure to cigarette smoking on young children were made clearer,

"This study adds further weight to the conclusion that adults' smoking may be detri-mental to the health of their children," they say. Social Trends 21, 1986 (Stationery Office; £17.50).

The chances of finding work were highest, and increasing slightly, in East Anglia and the South-west, where in 1985, 40 per cent or more of un-employed men were finding jobs, but slimmest in the West Midlands, where the percentage was still under 30.

The risks of becoming un-employed were worst in the North and North-west.

Geoffrey Smith

The diplomatic sensitivity with which Mrs Thatcher plays her hand may well be the critical factor at the Commonwealth mini-summit.

Flexibility is the essence of the British negotiating po-sition agreed on Thursday, first in the Cabinet's Overseas and Defence Committee, and then swiftly endorsed by the full Cabinet. That must mean that u good deal of tactical discretion has in fact been given to the Prime Minister.

The Government is now

The Government is now ready to consider further measures against South Africa. Certain specific possibilities were discussed in Cahinet. But it does not believe that next week's meeting is the occasion to decide up them.

That is partly because only seven of the 49 Commonwealth members will be represented, partly because Sir Geoffrey Howe undertook his diplomatic mission on behalf of the European Community and it might look a little discourteous to take action before he has had a chance to report to his European part-ners, but above all because of the need for the Commonwealth to move in concert with

Priority to get everyone in line

There is some overlap in the measures under consideration hy the Commonwealth, the European Cummunity and the United States. But the lists are hy no means identical. Yet for different forms of pressure upon South Africa to be adopted by all three would be as near as anyone could get to a guarantee that none of them would be effective.

So the British Government sees the first priority as being to get the international community in line. There seems to be no hard and fast agreement as to how that should be done, but the assumption is that the time for decision will be when the European foreign ministers meet in mid-September,

In substance, that approach is consistent with Sir Geoffrey's publicly declared belief that further measures would be required if his mission to South Africa were ful. He cannot have been too displeased with the outcome of the discussion with his colleagues or he would surely have taken the argu-ment to the full Cabinet, where he was known to have more support than in the Overseas and Defence Committee. But he would still have preferred the British approach to be mure specific and less flexible. He might well have liked Britain to propose that the Commonwealth should next week approve a list of possible measures, each of which would be implemented only if subsequently endorsed by the European Community. Above ull, he is anxious to convince the rest of the not being unreasonable in its uttitude towards South Africa. Will Mrs Thatcher carry conviction on that score? So much will depend on how she presents the Government's position. It is in fact more logical and more practical than the ideas of many of the rhetorical enthusiasts for sanctions.

The failure iding more vigorously of the South African mission of Sir Geoffrey Howe, the than she originally intended if she finds some other Common-wealth leaders being obtuse or Foreign Secretary, has also added to their resolve.

No method of consequence for hringing the international community into line on South Africa has been ruled out by the British Government, But there are two possible dangers in its approach. Mrs Thatcher may not display the patience and tactical adroitness to exercise successfully the discretion she has been given; and the fact that she has so much discretion may tempt her once she is beyond the control of the Cabinet to revert once again to her instinctive disapproval of all sanctions, whatever name they go hy. A number of her colleagues did not take it as a happy omen that the briefings given after Thursday's Cabinet, presumably hy her press secretary, were not consistent with what they believed they had decided in Cabinet.

Unions ask Senators send new Queen to intervene

By Mark Ellis

The Queen is being urged by Commonwealth trades union leaders to intervene on the question of Britain's imposing sanctions against South Africa with a personal appeal to the Prime Minister.

Warning of the danger of the break-up of the Commonwealth, the union leaders say that Mrs Thatcher should be advised against opposing sanctions.

The message was revealed after a special meeting of the secring committee of the Commonwealth Trade Union Council, which preceded tomorrow's mini-summit.

Mrs Shirley Carr, chairman of the Council, said: "As head of the Commonwealth, the Oueen should show that Mrs Thatcher is not head of the Commonwealth and should not be dictating to Commonwealth Prime Ministers."

Mrs Thatcher's refusal to meet the Commonwealth Trade Union Council was greeted with astonishment and brought fierce condemnation of her view that sanctious would harm the hlack people of South Africa. Yesterday a CTUC letter to Mrs Thatcher demanding "effective and wide-ranging" economic sanctions was delivered to Downing Street. It said: "We are frankly astonished and deeply disappointed that you are not available to discuss these matters with us."

But as EEC bureaucrats cleared their desks this week for the summer break and the organization's headquarters took on a deserted air, officials gave notice that a full agenda of unresolved issues would be waiting for British ministers when business resumed in

In addition to South Africa, questions likely to produce a stormy final four months of the British presidency - the third time Britain has taken the chair since it joined the Community in 1973 - include European air fares, relations with Turkey, the continuing trade war with the US and headaches left over from the temporary budget solution achieved in July.

The chill grey water of the Solent will soon be bouled — to the profit of an Australian entrepreneur. It could make a second furture for Gary Normal — that really is his name — from bottled seawater. He is currently marketing America's Cup water: 250 mg bottles of the stuff from the sea off Fremantle, where the cup will be sailed for later this year. You might think that such a notion would work only with senti-mental, gimmick-loving Americans, but hardbitten Australians are queuing up to spend slightly more than £4 a time for their bottled sea.

On a recent trip to England, however, Normal met David Evans, a member of the British America's Cup syndicate. Evans suggested diversification: why not, he said, bottle the waters where the first America's Cup races were held: the special gut-cburning stuff from around the Isle of Wight? Normal was struck by the logic of this: he returns to England soon to begin his project of bottling Solent water. The Australians, I am sure, will lap it up.

War of two faiths in Nicaragua

His name. On all the main roads, near the larger centres of population there are huge printed posters reading simply: PARA NOSOTROS NO HAY MAS QUE UN SOLO DIOS

I Cor, 8:6. "There is for us only one God.") But someone has been going round adding to each poster the

EL DIOS DE LOS POBRES!! The "one single God", without further qualification, is the God of the Nicaraguan Roman Catholic hierarchy, led by Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo. Archbishop of Managua. And this is also the God of Nicaragua's middle-class opposition, all of which — including Protestant oppositionists - looks to the cardinal as its political leader. The posters are assumed to be funded by the cardinal's North American friends

"The God of the poor" is the God of the governing Frente Nacional Sandinista, of the three (formerly four) Catholic priests who are members of the government to defiance of the hierarchy and of the Pope; and of the many Catholic (and some Protestant) clergy and lay people, Nicaraguan and oon-Nicaraguan, who have worked among the Nicaraguan poor and who see the Sandinista government as generally promoting the interests of the poor.

n the first Sunday of our stay in Nicaragua, my wife and I went to the little Church of San Domingo de las Sierritas, near Managua, to hear the cardinal say mass and preach. San Domingo is a pretty little church, high and cool. It lies in a relatively affluent area, and the congregation was a middle-class vision crews: the cardinal is always news. We followed the crews into the sacristy, where he was being filmed christening a baby. International publicity is part of his armoury in his struggle against the Sandinistas and their

After the christening we all went back into the church. By mistake, my wife and I took the places intended for the baby's parents. Nobody even murmured. Nicaraguans are an unusually gentle people, in most contexts. The cardinal is something of an exception. Even when saying mass he seemed that morning to be spoiling for a fight. As he out on his vestments. I thought he looked like a boxer getting ready for the ring. He is a small, powerfully built man, running to fat; has markedly Indian features, bullet head, thick neck, heavy jaw. His most marked expressive characteristic is that the corners of his mouth turn sharply down.

The cardinal read out, in a strong, clear voice, a letter of the Nicaraguan episcopate on "The Eucharist. Source of Unity of Inspiration". It was a well-written statement, in high Castilian style, with classical overtones. "They blame the church for silence, while they silence it . . . "

It contained a long passage, which the cardinal read out with especial resonance, attacking what he and his followers call "the popular church" (iglesio populor), meaning those who regard them-selves as followers of el Dios de los pobres (who retort with the phrase iglesio institucional, applied to the cardinal and his supporters). There was another passage, read with no special emphasis, which may be of more significance in the evolving struggle between Church and State in Nicaragua. The key sentence read:

"We judge that any form of aid. whatever its source, which may lead to destruction, pain and death for our families or to hatred and division between our peoples is to be condemned.

Press censorship did not allow that episcopal letter (or several others before it) to appear io the newspapers. But it was readily available from diocesan press offices in Nicaragua, and became the subject of delighted comment in the April issue of Envio, a monthly review published by the Instituto Histórico Centroomericano io Managua. II reflects the views of an influential group of Catholic intellectuals (priests and lay peoplc) who are, as they say, in Managua, with the process". The process in question is the revolutionary process, especially in its social aspects. The review singles out that passage, underlining parts of it, calling it a historic step (paso historico) and claiming that it means "the condemnation of the military aid of Ronald Reagan's said before; and it even seems an implicit condemnation of the position the cardinal himself less than a year before. It doesn't seem an unreasonable inference that a section, perhaps a majority, of the Nicaraguan hierarchy is becoming refractory against the cardinal's leadership. in relation to the civil war. As regards the iglesia popular, he still calls the tune, but no longer on the Contras, it would seem. Some of the bishops, especially from the northern and eastern dioceses where they know most about Contras at first hand, are believed to have had misgivings about the cardinal's lead on this matter for some time, on moral and humanitarian grounds. Others, more politically minded, may well feel that the cardinal's line simply doesn't make sense today, in terms of the church's interests. The Contras have never looked as if they could overthrow the Sandioistas, and they look even less like it now than they did io 1983-1984 (which was their peak). To call on the Sandinistas, as the cardinal has regularly done, to negotiate with the Contras is to call for what is not going to happen. Nobody who knows any-thing about the Sandinistas believes that they would negotiate with the Contras even if Managua were about to fall, which it is not. If it ever does fall, it will be to the invading armed forces of the United States.

It rather looks as if prudent churchmen may currently be a rising force in the Nicaraguan episcopate, and that they may be beginning to rein in their impetuous primate. If all that is so, it is not surprising if the cardinal looked a bit grim at mass that April morning in San Domingo de la Sierritas. The Pope's visit to Nicaragua in 1983 is perhaps the most im portant, and certainly the most dramatic, episode in the great struggle between the institutional un solo Dios and el Dios de los pobres in Latio America in the late twentieth century. Both sides had looked to the Pope for a blessing, legitimizing its interpretation of the church's teaching. The Pope's concept of bis own authority is simply not compatible with the versions of liberation theology, and of el Dios de los pobres, which are fervently embraced by those Catholics wbo io Nicaragua are "with the process". On the other hand, it was natural for a Pope bent on restoring authority within the church to come to the support of an archbishop whose authority was being challenged and subverted. What was being challenged and sub-verted was not just the authority of Miguel Obando y Bravo but the very concept of the hierarchy, the whole structure of which the Pope himself is the apex. So this formidable Pope, in taking on Sandinista Nicaragua, was taking on an adversary no less formidable than himself: an adversary representing forces that may possibly defeat the entire purpose of his pontificate and leave papal authority in ruins throughout Latin America before the end of the millennium.

ertainly the radical curreots io the church set in contributed to the Nicaraguan process. And the result of the process was something unique in history: a revolutionary government including four Catholic priests, with widespread Catholic support, and re-garded by a significant section of the Catholic Church as an earthly manifestation of the will of the God of the Poor. For these believers, the process is to culminate in el Reino de Dios: the Kingdom of God. Among Sandinistas in Nicaragua, those words "the Kingdom of God" crop up in speech and in priot with a frequency disquieting to the secular visitor; and to some religious visitors as well. What is most striking is the casuol way in which the words are osed. People refer to the coming Kingdom of God as if they were waiting for a n Managua last April, io the house of a woman wbom I shall call Victoria, my wife and I watched a video of the Pope's visit, just as it had been broadcast live on Nicaraguan television. Victoria is a practising Catholic and is also "with the process". The Pope's visit had been a distressing experience for her and for many others. She can't have enjoyed the replay; but she wanted us to see bow it had been. Victoria is a a kind of leader of one of the comunidades de base (basic Christian communities) in one of the poor barries of Managua. The comunidades were set up in an effort to remedy the shortage of parish clergy. Most of them appear to have become vehicles of liberation theology, and they are generally regarded with suspicion by conservatives in the church. The comunidades were anxious to play their full part in the great event of the Pope's visit. Victoria's spent weeks preparing a big banner which they carried out to Sandino Airport on the big day, March 4, 1983.

The video begins. The nine commandantes de la revolución are all there. Victoria's banner is there: BIEVENIDO JUAN PABLO EN LA TIERRA DE SANDINO.

The Pope is welcomed oo behalf of the three senior comondantes by Daniel Ortega, co-ordinator of the National Directorate (later elected president). With his spectacles and his mane of brown hair waving in the breeze, he seems like a young, progressive beadmaster anxious to make an impression. I quote from my rough notes,

"You are being received by a beroic people ... 50,000 dead ... social and moral changes' Pope looks as if he had toothache; holding jaw with left hand: "American threat ... Worthy riposte to intervención Norte-americana . . . Pope's bead bowed more and more on hand. Ortega talks of Christians "basiog themselves on faith corresponding to the revolution".

Pope back to holding jaw. After Daniel Ortega's very long liscourse the government has to be greeted: the first really tricky bit, since it includes those four priests. The Pope is meant to pass along, acknowledgiog the government's collective existence by some kind of comprebensive

But the Minister for Culture, Father Ernesto Cardenal, a frail person with long white hair and a white beard, takes off his black beret and kneels before the Pope for a blessing. And the Pope, instead of blessing, wags a finger of admonition, saying sternly: "You must regularize (arreglar) your situation with the Vatican.

"Ernesto cried," says Victoria, "and everybody came over to comfort him."

Emesto Cardenal is something more important, in the eyes of many Nicaraguans, than either a minister or even a priest. He is a poet one of the two most distinguished living Nicaraguan poets, to an extent, I think, unknown in any other part of the modern

When the Pope soubbed Ernesto, many Nicaraguans - all those "with the process" and probably quite a few others as well — felt themselves spubbed. Ernesto himself, though burt, did not take the snub so heavily, or lose his sense of humour. He tells of bow stricken bis mother was. "I thought he would treat you like a father," she said.

"But he did treat me like a father," said Ernesto. "He just didn't treat me like a mother.'

Victoria, like others we met, was puzzled, as well as distressed, by the Pope's rebuke. It seemed disproportionate, gratuitous, petty; a needless piece of bumiliation. That is pretty much how I saw it myself when I saw it on

But later, after I had looked more closely at what is at stake-in Nicaragua, I felt rather differently about it. The Sandinista fusion of religion and politics - not only religion and Marxism, but also *religi*on o*nd nationalism*, which is much more dangerous - puts at risk, throughout the vast spiritual battleground of Latin America, the Pope's mission to restore the Magisterium, the teaching authority of the papacy. Ernesto is a committed and enthusiastic agent of the Sandinista fusion.

So when Ernesto knelt before the Pope, the Pope bad to see, not just an estimable if misguided human being but an insidious, incarnate threat to the Universal Church, and to the Pope's own mission. And not just a threat, but a trap as well. If the Pope gave Ernesto the blessing Ernesto was asking — guilelessly as it seemed, but perhaps with some guile in the background somewhere - would the Pope not be seen as blessing the Sandinista fusion itself? And if so, would he not be conniving at the sabotage of his own great mission, and of the church entrusted to him?

. Thinking over that scene now, in terms of the forces represented by the protagonists, it is not Ernesto t am sorry for. It is the

The reason for this is that Ernesto and his friends are engaged among living realities — the cause of the poor, the defence of Nicaragua - whereas the Pope has dedicated bis life to the resuscitation of an extinct abstrac-

Pope is succeeding in bringing back this authority: that is the meaning of the phrase "the Catho-lic restoratioo" used by some commentators. It is true that this Pope is far more popular than any Pope has been before. But popularity is not to be confused with authority. Catholics love this Pope, but when he solemnly tells them that they must behave in some way that they don't find convenient, they just don't take a blind bit of notice of him.

John Paul II brought the weight of the Magisterium to bear agaiost the liberation theologiaos, but the thing didn't work. The spring seems to be broken. He is getting to look more and more like an ioternational Canute, magisterially perambulating all the strands of the world, before huge and admiring audiences, without the slightest effect on the tides.

Now all this has an important bearing on the prospects for Sandinismo, and also on the prospects for efforts to contain or extirpate it.

Sondinismo is apparently regarded in Wasbington as an essentially alien ideology, cumningly decked out in some kind of Latin American fancy-dress. I don't know whether they really believe these things in Wash-ington, or whether they only pretend to believe them, but if they do believe this one, they are in fundamental error, and headed for more unnecessary trouble.

Sandinismo is a thoroughly Latin American ideology, with deep roots in Latin American history, and specifically in the: bistory of Nicaragua. Far from being an alien phenomenon in Nicaragua, it is a native response to alien domination: that of the United States. Perhaps that is the basic reason why Sandinismo, viewed from Washington, looks so I think it would now be more accurate to speak of Sandinismo as a foith rather than an ideology. It is the most formidable kind of faith, the kind that is emotionally fused with national pride. And this kind of faith is now alight in every corner of Latin America.

It is true that it is oot the only kind of faith around. Latin America is now a melting-pot where faith is concerned. The traditional Catholic Church is collapsing, not just on one side but on two. On one side are the Christian revolutionaries, enlarging that espacio of theirs, appropriating the symbols, and so oo. On the other, lots of Catholics have been defecting to the Protestant fundamentalist sects. The Latin American bishops, in their reply to the Pope's Instruction, sought to ascribe the inroads of the fundamentalists to the activities of the CIA. I think the bishops overestimate the CIA. It looks as if there are a lot of people who are attracted neither to the old kind of Catholicism nor the new one, and who are looking for a different kind of faith; more individual, more quietist. But it is the new Catholicism that has the political dynamic, the capacity for revolutionary social transformation, and the capacity to fuse with national pride - as in earlier times millennialist Puritanism did. first io England and then in North America.

s it necessary for the United States to take on the new Faith, by storming Ma-nagua, the new Geneva? There are three arguments by which it is alleged to be necessary to proceed in this way. The first is that the new faith is not really a faith at all, but a disguise under which the Soviet power advances; the second, that even if the new faith is native to Latin America, it is basically bostile to the US; and the third that the oew faith is intrinsically oppressive and totalitarian. One of Sondinismo's essential characteristics is the restoration of national pride. People who are as fiercely and proudly nationalist as the Sandinistas are, are not about to hand their country over to a new master once they have got rid of the old one. Or rather, they are not about to do that voluntarily. They could be pushed into it if they felt it was the only alternative to surrendering to the power of the

But the Cuban precedent is there. The more "successful" Reagan's pressure on Nicaragua is. the more Nicaragua is likely to be forced in that direction. If Soviet power does indeed come to extend into Central America, it will be by courtesy of Ronald Reagan.

. There is more substance in the second point, Latin American nationalism. includiog Sandinismo, is anti-American; or anti-North-American, as they say, being Americans themselves. The movement's hero Sandino himself was fiercely anti-US — as well he might be, fighting the US Marines in his own country.

There is, I think, very little personal hatred in Nicaraguan anti-Americanism. Not even personal hatred for Ronald Reagan. There has been nothing in Nicaragua, about Reagan, that at all corresponds to, for example, the torrent of frantic and obscene iconography which Buenos Aires directed at Margaret Thatcher at the time of the Falklands War.

Sandinistas, indeed, understand Reagan rather better than most foreigners do. They understand, and up to a point respect, his talk about "standing tall", because standing tall" is what Sandinismo, too, is all about. They recognize in Reagan, to that extent. a partly kindred spirit. "Ronald Reagan," one Sandinista told me, "is the Che Guevara of imperialism.

What Sandinistas cannot accept, and will resist literally to their last breath, is the insistence. that for Americans to be seen to stand tall, Nicaraguans must cringe. The Sandinista elite is unquestionably "joined to the people", in that, unlike other, Latin American juntas, it has worked to improve the condition of the poor and to provide bumane government.

I would define the nature of this state as elitist and authoritarian, but not totalitarian, and not-physically oppressive; although it can be held (and is held by the opposition) that rule by an elite, and press censorship, in themselves constitute oppression. That may be so, but if so, it is a milder form of oppression than the word generally conjures up or than prevails in most of Latin America.

The security forces are more restrained, and less apt to throw their weight around, than in other-Latin American countries. The gulag state. People are not free to publish attacks on the regime in the media, but feel absolutely free to attack it in private conversation, or from the pulpit.

il that may of course change under the pressures of the war, and other pressures. I am speaking of how thingsare now. The picture projected by the Reagan administration of present-day Nicaragua as a sort oftotalitarian inferno is very far from the truth - as even American embassy officials occasionally admit In its early years, the regime made remarkable progress in the eradication of illiteracy and disease, and the replacement of substandard housing. But these achievements are now at risk because of the economic pressures on Nicaragua and because of the disruption of production in the countryside caused by Contra attacks on villages and co-opcratives. There are now shortages of virtually everything, even water. So in terms of making life miserable for most Nicaraguans; the Reagan pressures have been quite successful. But the success would make some kind of sense even of a nasty kind - only if the misery were putting the skids under the Sandinistas.

tt is true that if elections were held now it is possible, though not in my opinioo likely, that the public hardship might result in a majority against the Sandinista Frente. But, as Washington must know, the Sandinistas have oo intention of letting themselves be put out of power in this way. Nor are unarmed masses of people about to rise up and expel the Sandinistas. It is true that there are sizable numbers who care very little about lo patrio or el decoro nacional. For those in the Atlantic provinces for whom Spanish is not the first language, and whose religion is not Catholie - English-speakers of Jamaican origin and some Indians - the notions of la patria and Sandinismo cannot have much appeal. Today the prevailing attitude in these provinces seems to be "wait and see". The Sandinistas cannot, in my opinion, be driven from Managua except by the direct use of US force. And if they are driven out. they will still go on fighting as guerrillas, and others will join them, and US forces will have to stay there to prevent a Sandinista come-back. And in that way, bogged down in Nicaragua, the United States would be taking on the forces of nationalism, not only in Nicaragua but throughout Latin America. That did not work out well in Indo-China, and I don't think it would work well in Latin America

STILL THE LAW

Mr Justice Stuart-Smith's argued - and the judge aceranting of an injunction to a number of plaintiffs, including Times Newspapers Ltd., against mass picketing at Wapping by the print unions and their sympathisers was a forceful restatement of the law rather than an extension of it.

In stating the principle that both employees and visitors at the Wapping printing plant "should have the right to pass on all roads, including the pavement, approaching the plant unobstructed by pickets or demonstrators, and particularly unnbstructed by pickets acting in an abusive, threatening or violent manner," he was stating the legally obvious. But he applied that general principle to the legal claims relating to Wapping with nice discrimination and with evident concern to balance the grievances of the union members against the rights of the company and its employees.

For instance, he disallowed the plaintiffs' claim that they had been subjected to the tort nf unreasonable harassment a "new" tort which had been produced by a judge in a South Wales case during the miners' dispute. Far from extending the law, then, he cast some doubt on the value of the one recent legal innovation in this field. That left the traditional torts of nuisance and intimidation. Here the judge asked two crucial questions. Did the picketing, marches and demonstrations amount to nuisance and intimidation of the Wapping employees? And, if they did, were the union and its officials liable at law for such torts? That the employees were subjected to the nuisance of unreasonable obstruction from mass pickets blocking the highway was all hut selfevident. But intimidation had to be established more carefully. Counsel for the unions cepted - that abuse, swearing and shoving did not in themselves amount to intimidation. The judge went nn to note, however, that the abuse by pickets had frequently included threats and that since there was "an abundance of evidence" of employees being followed, molested, assaulted and subjected to criminal damage to their cars and houses, such threats had to be taken seriously. Intimidation, then, had certainly been attempted. Only the fine point that the employees had not bowed to such threats prevented the court from finding that it had been successfully committed. But were the unions liable? They were nnt liable, concluded the court, just because they had nrganised a picket or a march in the course of which these tortinus acts had been committed. Nnr would they become liable merely because, in addition, they could foresee such consequences.

It was not until three conditions were fulfilled that the court found against the uninns. These were that substantial numbers of union members were involved in the vinlence and intimidation; that such vinlence and intimidation were regular consequences of the marches and demnnstrations organised by union officials; and that union officials had used nane of their disciplinary powers to prevent such actions by union mem-

Once these had been established, the judge had little alternative hut to instruct the unions to limit their pickets to six and to ensure that future marches are "disciplined, peaceful and subject to the direction of the police." Should these conditions be violated and union officials cannot show they have taken steps to prevent violence and intimidation, they will face

fines. Such a judgement is so plainly in line with longestablished law that it is difficult to see how the printing unions, or anyone else, could have expected a different decision. That raises the question, however, of why the mass picketing at Wapping, with its regular violence and frequent intimidation, has continued so long.

One reason is undoubtedly practical. The police, overstretched at times, faced the unexpected challenges of large demonstrations. They accordingly used their discretion to protect the employees - who, it should be remembered, have been enabled to continue working throughout - rather than to curtail the unions' nhstructive tactics altogether. That decision was perhaps a prudent one, hut as the judge implied, it may also have stretched the limits of police discretion.

A less creditable factor, however, is the feeling that infects the Labour Party and the unions that physical force, short of outright vinlence (and that distinction is sometimes fudged) is a legitimate tactic against an employer in an industrial dispute. Not only is that wrong and dangerous in itself, hut it also ignores the rights, indeed the very existence, of the employees who continue tn work.

When the Shadow Home Secretary, Mr Gerald Kaufman, described the police at Wapping as "a private security service to enable Mr Murdoch to pocket his profits", he was attacking the idea that lawahiding citizens deserve police protection against riotous mobs. It is worrying that such sentiments are expressed frequently enough for us to be surprised to learn that they are not the law.

MALAYSIAN RENEWAL

The recent hanging of two new economic policy, a 20-Australian heroin smugglers brought Malaysia uncomfortably into British rgaze: A mistaken impression was fostered: this is no land of catastrophe and strife. It is that rare creature, a Third World success. The armed forces are loyal to an elected government and respectful of democracy. The judiciary is independent. There are ahundant natural resources.

But the recession in world trade has hit hard. Malaysia's gdp is expected to grow by only two per cent in 1986. Prices for all the country's traditional exports are depressed; oil revenues have plunged.

The fat years have been wasted. Too much has been spent on prestige projects such as the construction of the longest bridge in Asia, linking Penang to the mainland. A national car industry has been created, hut every car produced is being sold at a loss and 25 per cent of production capacity lies unused. A recent United Nations study identified Malaysian bureaucracy as a major hinthrance to foreign investors and local husinessmen alike. The year programme to give ethnic Malays a larger share of the economic cake has created a handful of Malay millionaires to the detriment of impoverished farmers and fishermen.

It is in this context that Malaysia tomorrow goes to the polls in the stiffest test yet faced by Prime Minister Mahatir and his National Front. Yet, despite economic reverse, it appears unlikely that the National Front will be supplanted. In the prosperous years of the early 1980s when the economy was growing at between 6 and 11 per cent per year, the ruling coalitinn won overwhelming dominance and the size of its lead will be too great for the opposition par-

The rural Parti Islam espouses a Muslim state. The formula ought to be nutrageous in this multi-religious community yet the party has waged a successful campaign amongst the poor and the disaffected, attacking the Front's venality.
The National Front has been rocked by scandals implicating members of Dr Mahathir's cabinet. The leader of the Chinese party within the coalition is facing charges in Singapore of criminal breach of trust in connection with share dealings. The National Front's 1982 election slogan of "clean, efficient and trustworthy" rings hollow four vears later.

Dr Mahathir must cleanse the stables, endeavouring to make his leadership more responsive to the reformers and a vnunger political generation, both within the National Front and in the opposition parties.

The young firehrand who wrote the explosive Malay Dilemma has become the type of politician he once attacked. The Prime Minister must take stock of Malaysians' needs in a changed economic climate and curb the excesses of a selfserving elite. Withnut reform and renewal in this rich and beautiful land, Islamic insurrection and racial strife cnuld become a horrifying reality.

FOURTH LEADER

G.K.Chestertnn used to say that if ever he felt like taking any exercise, he would lie down until he got over it. G.K.Chesterton would not have got on in Japan. On the other hand it is more important from their point of view that the Japanese should get on over here, and there are signs that they are about to go the wrong way about it.

This observation springs from the announcement that the new UK hranch of Komatsu which is not a martial art hut an earth moving equipment company, is encouraging its employees to start the day with five minutes of physical jerks. This routine, commonplace in the land of the rising sun, is said to improve workers' fitness, raise their morale and reduce their propensity to have accidents.

" No doubt it does. The mistake they are about to make at the Komatsu plant on Tyneside, is to say that the workers should do it. A firm with more experience of the people of this country would have issued a strict order that they shouldn't.

There is in the British, not least those who live in the area of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, something which we like in think of as the hulldog spirit, hut which nthers might call hloody-mindedness. This happy hreed, let Nippon know, does not like doing what's good for it.

It is not just that the British are an inefficient race. It is actually that they do not want tn be anything else. Trains run late in the Middle East and Africa because they cannot help it; and in India because they're too husy with the paperwork to notice. Here they run late because we associate trains which run on time with Mussolini. Commuters may stamp their feet and grumble on the up-line platform at Billericay or Haywards Heath. But deep down inside, they would not want it any other way. We distrust things that work, including ourselves. This dislike of regimentation is manifested most clearly in the national attitude to exercise. For all anyone knows even Osbert Sitwell who wrote bitterly about compulsory games at school, might have developed into a wing threequarter of rare gifts had anyone introduced an element of choice into his curriculum or even banned sport altogether. As it is, the muscular Christianity which was the precept for several generations of British schoolchildren, has helped tn encnurage the natinnal inclination to skive.

There are parts of surburban Landon through which it is dangerous to walk at dusk for fear of being knocked down, not by muggers but joggers. One might venture to suggest that these hapless young runners with their beanstalk legs and heaving chests would no more pound the pavements if one asked them to than a tomcat might be forced to play the fiddle. They do it not because they think it is good for them, but because half the doctors of England say it isn't.

At least Komatsu have not made the mistake of making exercise mandatory. But workers are said to have been left with the clear impression that participation is very much expected of them. What the management should have done is to proclaim that on no account should any employee be seen to stretch his/her legs in the company's time. By nightfall, had it done so, the shop stewards would have demanded a gymnasium, a swimming pool, a small corps of PE instructors, competitive handball at coffee hreak and a silver cup for the highest number of nine o' clock pressups. Hospice service and Aids victims

From the Chairman of St Christopher's Hospice Sir, No special service, particularly one devoted to malignant disease, should be blamed for failure to admit patients who are outside their commitment and expertise (report, July 28). During the 20 years of the modern hospice movement the many units and teams that have developed have concentrated almost exclusively on helping pa-tients and families with severe problems from terminal cancer and, to a lesser extent, motor neurone disease.

Over 130,000 people die each year in England and Wales from cancer and the pressure on the fewer than 2,000 beds available is such that few can contemplate admining patients with other needs unless in exceptional circumstances.

Shakespeare's samphire, Crithmum maritimum, the rock samphire, is a member of the carrot family that grows mainly on cliffs and rocks, and the saltmarsh plant he ate in Brittany and knows from East Anglia is the marsh samphire, a group of species of Salicornia belonging to the spinach family.

Samphire, or sampier, was herbe de St Pierre, the "plant of the rock" once used to treat patients with stones in the hladder. The salicornias were known to the herbalist Gerard as glassworts because the sodium carbonate in their ashes was useful in glassmaking they became known as samphire because they were as good to eat as C. maritimum.

According to the late Geoffrey Grigson, Shakespeare may have known from Gerard's Herbal that "Rocke Sampier groweth on the rocky cliffs at Dover", and later Robert Turper wrote "it is incredibly dangerous to gather, yet many adventure it" (from the cliffs of the Isle of Wight, for dispatch to London wholesalers in casks of sea water). Chapel heritage From the Rev Ralph E. Fennell

Sir, If more non-conformist chapels are to be preserved, as Mr Hassall suggests (July 26), more help will have to be made available by way of grant aid. All too often trustees are told that a particular chapel is worthy of listing but not of sufficient merit to warrant an English Heritage grant for its repair and restoration.

This suggests that far too many buildings are being listed. If a more selective policy were pursued, there would be a far greater chance of grant aid being available and ultimately more buildings being preserved.

What is more, when grant aid is given, onerous conditions are frequently attached which preclude alterations to the interior, despite the Ecclesiastical Exemption Clause. These conditions sometimes pose serious diffi-culties for trustees whose primary concern is the living work of the Church, not the retention of a listed huilding.

The Ecclesiastical Exemption Clause is in the best interests of conservationists and trustees alike: without it many more listed buildings are likely to be disposed of or even demolished.

In particular the clause enables trustees to make greater use of the total cubic capacity, for so often the problem is one of size: congregations have diminished, the great barn-like chapels of yester-year are no longer viable and interior alteration and refurbishment lead to their preservation.

However, the problem is not simply one of size. The Liturgical Movement has brought renewal to worship with less formality and greater participation. For a congregation to have a sense of being a family gathered round the Lord's Table rearrangements have had to be made. Church and chapel buildings today are very much needed for

Hovering on the edge of poverty From Mr Paul Ashton Sir, In your report (July 26) on the Government's release of statistics relating to low income families. you say that the figures suggest that "more than 10 million Brisons are living in poverty", and that the "poverty line" is defined for a single person as £29.40 a week and for a couple as £48.80. Neither statement is factual, however, though, of course, the poverty lobby would like us to believe that they are.

In fact no post-war government has ever released figures on the number of people in poverty. No government has ever agreed on exactly what constitutes poverty. The estimate of 10 million poor people is that given by Labour MP, Frank Field, and is based upon Government figures of the number of people who receive supplementary benefit or who have an income at or below this benefit

People on supplementary benefit cannot be described as living in poverty simply because they receive this benefit or because they have an income equal to it. Governments provide supplementary benefit so as to prevent poverty. So if the State benefit level is described as an official "poverty line", then plainly those receiving it or who have an income at that level are not in poverty.

There might well be a case of defining those in poverty as people with incomes below the supplementary benefit level, but is it any wonder that the Child Poverty Action Group claims that the Government statistics show that one in three Britons (about 18 million people) live in or on the edge of poverty, when the "edge of poverty" is taken by the CPAG to be a level of income some 40 per cent higher than the basic benefit level?

Television time

From Mr G. L. Lloyd Sir. The BBC prides itself on its impartial stance in reporting politics. In Parliament the Labour and Alliance Opposition parties see it as their duty to oppose.

Surely, then, the claim of the Alliance to a fairer share of television time should be denied on the grounds that a point of view has basically two strands — for and against.

What we are now seeing on our screens is a statement of a Government position, followed by an anti-view from the Labour Party, followed by yet another anti-view expressed by an Alliance spokesman. This, then, is not out oras most all Government measures. Yours faithfully,

Sir. It is a pleasure to recognise the old "Fourth Leader", albeit third, in the traditional vein of Times humour ("Reigning cats - and dogs", July 28).

I cannot recall when this feature was suppressed, but in the forties, when I was a novice in a Benedictine monastery, it was the practice to read the Fourth Leader, subject to approval, in the refectory, while the brethren were taking their first substantial meal. Any student of monasticism knows the significance attached by the early Fathers to the "noonday demon" or accidie. Hard to define, it has been described as 'don't care-ishness" and "torpor". though the latter is more appropriate to the time after lunch. The Times reading would follow a passage from Scripture and the combination of divinity, levity and a full platter seemed to be just the thing for getting the brethren through this small daily crisis. Vocations to the monastic life have notoriously declined. One hazards a guess that the absence of this special brand of light relief may be a contributing factor. ON THIS DAY

AUGUST 2 1930

The R 100 was designed by Sir Barnes Wallis at the Airship Guarantee Company at Howden

Yorkshire: its companion ship, the R 101, was the work of a overnment team. A leader in the paper on the two airships thought that "... airship transport... will some day be available for the safe and sure conveyance of passengers . . . between different parts of the Empire. . . "Those hopes vanished when the R 101 crashed in France on its maiden voyage in October 1930, the disaster overwhelming the success of the R 100, which was eventually dismantled

THE R 100 AT MONTREAL

From Our Own Correspondent The R 100 was moored successfully at St. Hubert airport, Montreal, at 5.33 (Eastern Standard time) this morning, 79 hours after leaving Cardington.

Oo the final stage of her journey she had a trying experience, for shortly after 9.30 p.m. on Thursday, as she was heading up the St awrence, she ran into a violent thunderstorm, which was accompanied by tempestuous winds. The airship was buffeted about and tossed hundreds of feet in the air, but she successfully rode out the storm without serious damage or difficulty. However, it was neces sary to reduce speed, and when news of the delay reached the airport the crowds which had issembled melted away and only a few people remained with the officials and workers. About 2 a.m. the lights of the airship were sighted, and at intervals thereafter until dawn a searchlight showed her cruising in circles above

A few minutes before 5 a.m. she turned her nose straight for the mooring tower, which was spar-kling with lights, and slowly and smoothly drifted on to the mast. Everything worked without a nitch, and the mooring was completed in half an hour.

Several thousand people had gathered on the field by the time the R 100 was moored, and all day crowds have cootinued to pour in a steady stream from Mootreal and the suburbs to see the airship. At the gang-plank the officers were met by the official reception party. All showed signs of weariness, but they denied experiencing any abnormal strain until they encountered the thunderstorm yesterday

TEST OF AIRWORTHINESS Wing Commander Colmore said that the two samples of bad weather encountered during the voyage had put the airworthiness of the airship to exacting tests, and she had come through admirably. However, he deprecated any exaggerated significance being attached to the voyage as, although the flight had proved the efficiency of the thick-bodied, blunt-nosed type of airship represented by the R t00, compared with the Zeppelin type, all her officers were agreed that ocither the R 100 nor the R 101 could be considered as adequate for anything like a regular Transatlantic service. Wing Commander Colmore described a voyage by airship as the most comfortable form of travel in the world, and said the only serious inconvenience had been to set back their watches and to drop three hours in one day, which brought meal times painfully close together.

LESSONS OF THE FLIGHT It was not to be expected that R 100 would complete her long voyage without meeting adverse winds at this time of the year, and her experieoces between the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Montreal justified the abnormally heavy load of petrol she carried. When she moored she had about 1,500 gallons of petrol left, which in favourable conditions might have given her an additional 700 miles. In the sort of weather she encountered over Canada this extra range would have been reduced to 550 miles.

Her margin, therefore, was not unduly large, and the difference between flying in fair weather and in strong headwinds is shown by the fact that, while 2,200 gallons of petzol sufficed for the first 1,000, she used 6.749 on the remaining 2,415 miles she covered. Her speeds varied from 40 to 85 miles, and Wing Commander Colmore's log shows the vital importance of weather reports in order that an airship may pick her course. Without the knowledge the com-mander had, she would certainly have made a slower voyage. . . .

LSO/Conlon Albert Hall/Radio 3

Besides the BBC's other commemorations of the Liszt centenary this week, it provided a double promenade concert with programmes for organ and orchestra.

The concluding account of the Dante Symphony, by the London Symphony Orcbestra under James Conlon, was a reassurance that the composer did sometimes contrive to keep his romaotic reach within his intellectual grasp.

The performance achieved notably beautiful effects in the almost pastel colours at the start of "Purgatorio", before the souls became so shackled to Liszt's time-serving fugue, growing ever more prolix as we awaited the invisible treble voices of the Finchley Children's Music Group who sang the "Magnificat" from the hall's topmost gallery. To preface the symphony were two examples of Liszt's capacity for self-satisfaction. The orchestral versions of his Two Legends, published only two years ago and here given their British premiere, are now thought possibly to have preceded the familiar piano form. This performance revealed more of a debt to Berling.

The arrangement of Schubert's "Wanderer" Fantasy as a species of piano concerto raised some old doubts about Liszt. For all that he kept the pianist as protagonist, the orchestra can become like an albatross around the player's neck.

Jorge Bolet, distinguished in both composers, played as if he were unaware of the burden, and was able to relate the inflation of Schubert's lyricism to the extravagance of orchestral rhetoric. Liszt as organ composer featured at the separate early-evening prom. Simon Preston here transferred his attention from his regular console at Westminster Abbey to an Albert Hall organ unfortunately not entirely free from gremlins during the latter part of the Prelude and Fugue on the name Bach.

A transcription of one of his own works furnished the short Trauerode, more a pictorial description of grief than an expression of feelings about the death of his son Daniel, aged 20. It was a quiet interlude before the extended Funtasy and Fugue on "Ad nos, ad salutarem undam", where the organist made no attempt to deny the theme's operatic origins in Meyerbeer.

Opera Bursting pride of youth

Don Juan

Vadstena, Sweden

The second floor of a medieval castle in a little visited part of western Sweden mny seem an improbable place to go in search of Don Giovanni. Improbability is compounded when the role of Giovanni, or Juan, turns out to be sung by a counter-tenor rather than by a hefty baritone. But so it is at Vadstena, on the shores of Lake Váttern, where there is to be seen Alessandro Melani's Don Juan, generally reckoned to be the first opera on the theme of the rake taken down to hell by a statue come to life. The summer Academy at Vadstena have been putting on baroque operas, late and early, for some 20 years oow, intermingled with a few contemporary pieces. The performers are all in their

their professional careers: the feeling is midway between the Britten-Pears School at Aldeburgh and St Louis in its very early days. Arnold Ostman presided over matters musical in the Seventies, Goran was among the producers at that time and Vadstena remains one of the places where young singers can show their paces.

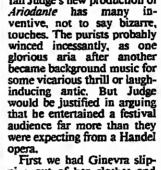

Certainly they could not wish for a more interesting piece than Melani's Don Juan. was commissioned by Sweden's own Queen Christinn and first performed in Rome in 1669 before her and 26 cardinals, who must have been a fairly Firbankian lot to judge from the raciness of the Parts of Melani's lengthy score are pleasant but forget-table, Juan's aria contemplating death, bowever, is worthy of Purcell, as is some of Proserpine's ballet music. There was eveo a neatly-worked suggestion of a parallel with Othelio: Polinesso taunting Ariodante by dangling Ginevra's hand-kerchief in front of him.

A more surrealist idea was to have two horn players oo stage in their evening dress (the costumes were otherwise Don Juan much more musicologist's piece.

Jazz A naive ecstasy

Jazz Warriors ICA

Ever since the lights went out on the Swing Era, the conventional wisdom has had it that only an Ellington, a Basic or a Kenton can afford to keep big jazz band together. It is with some sense of unreality, then, that one finds oneself reporting the existence to London of not one 21-piece azz orchestra, but two. Hot on the heels of Loose Tubes, whose most recent triumph was described on this page a few days ago, come the Jazz Warriors, an ensemble of very different temperament born n few months ago and fronted by the saxophonist Courtney Pine.

The five pieces they per-formed on Thursday night made it apparent that the polish and the sharp wit of Loose Tubes are not in their armoury. Instead they aim for the kind of permanent ecstasy that was the characteristic goal of the followers of John Coltrane in the late Sixties, symbolized by their periodpiece version of Pharoah Sanders's "The Creator Has a Master Plan".

Stressing the primacy of feeling over technique can easily lead, as it did in an ambitiously scored piece by Pine titled "St Maurice of Aragon", to a sense of naivety, and indeed the band seemed happiest when the massed horns fell silent and a solo improviser held forth over the loose-limbed rhythm section.

Their virtues and defects were summed up in "Many Pauses", composed by their veteran trumpeter, Harold Beckett. Brief fanfares en-closed solos from most of the musicinns, each of whom was free to set his own matrix of rhythm and harmony. As an ensemble piece it lacked a shred of meaning, but the vibraphonist, Orpheus Robinson, as energetically swinging as a young Lionel Hampton, and the strikingly eloquent flautist. Philip Bent, made a lasting impression.

It would be wrong, though, not to remark on the puzzling and potentially worrying racial divisioo between the Jazz Warriors, who are all black, and the all-white Loose Tubes. Is it not also strange that, in 1986, neither can find room in its ranks for a woman?

Radio Serious business of making 'em laugh

The plight of the radio funny man is a bit like that of the blue comedian set down to entertain an audience of presbyterian elders: "Ye'll no get a laugh out of us, laddie". Or rather "Ye'll no get a laugh out of me multiplied by half a million". The precise figure is neither here nor there, but the analogy is close because every radio broadcaster is, in effect, addressing an audience of one (or maybe two or three) multiplied thousands of times over, an audience who sits or stands or wanders about pretty well impervious to the warm tide of sympathy that rises when a comic begins to make live contact.

The successful comedy shows get over this by building up a fund of sympathy, and I'm Sorry I Haven't A Clue (Radio 4, Saturdays, repeating Wednesdays) is one of them. We know now what to expect of the resident panel (Brooke-Taylor, Rushton, Garden, Junkin) as they maunder like four mutinous cretins never quite safely under the control of charge-ourse Lyttelton. On the strength of a pre-

The "make-me-laughdamn-you" response is at its most active with newcomers, while the best wear it down. However, I give nothing for the chances of Trivia Test Match (Radio 4, Wednesdays, regurgitating Thursdays). That the Radio Times billing refers to Paul Spencer as groundsman is a gloomy portent and the product lives down to it. Here is another panel game, one based loosely, and for me so far incomprehensively, on the laws of cricket. Tim Rice, Willie Rushton (again), William Franklyn and Martin Jarvis are the players, Brian Johnston (inevitably) the umpire. The questions are of such amazing, such heterogeneous inconsequence — "Which is the most middle-class town in England?" classic. Bryan Appleyard met a veteran who still likes to

way up a ladder out-side the Haymarket Theatre Royal, close to Piccadilly Circus.
That's where the 50 or so photographers want him, so that's where he goes. "Whn ees zis guy?" asks a young French tourist, irritated at being forced into the road by the grawing crawd. 'Jack Lemmon . . . aah". He seems placated by the information.

The crowd lurches back into the stalls bar, a tide of camera equipment and flagging bonhomie, Lemman keeps going, answering every question, shaking every hand and even autographing a few photographs.

For television, radio and the press, without any detectable weariness he trots nut the same answers - "No, I've never played on the London stage before... Yes, it's a great thrill... No, I wasn't worried about terrorism..." - and every time he sounds as though he means it, is impressed by the acuity of the questioner and would like to get to know him better. The funny thing is that he does, he is and he would. For Lemmon is as nice, patient and even-tempered as everybody says he, is. Dressed in light blue windeheater, Reebok tennis shoes, grey cords and a blue towelling shirt, he looks the essence of stable, tolerant, wealthy middle America. The one negative touch is that he looks a little frail. The 61 years have pretty thoroughly marked him and it scems improbable that he can sustain the three hours 15 minutes of Jonathan Miller's production of Eogene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night, which opens at the Haymarket on August 4. Miller is in evidence amnng the hacks and tells the story of Lemmnn's casting as James

"Done", said Peters, and the show was on the road, running finally into Broadway where it picked up startled and impressed reviews. Miller had shortened the immense play by running speeches over each other. It represented perhaps the first genuinely new approach to a work which is about as sacred as hot dogs and motherhood

But Lemmon is sacred too. In comedy and in tragedy he has come to represent the reasonable guy confronted by the unreasonable - immorality in The Anariment, the need to be a woman in Some Like It Hot or the enduringly cantan-kerous Walter Matthau. Latterly he has also taken on the cause of outraged liberalism in the film Missing and in his real-life support of ecology were not exactly William Randolph Hearst's style. The image of a hursting cornucopia guided his hand when he built a little place of his own in the hills overlooking the surf-blasted coast of California at San Simeon, midway between

Los Angeles and San Francisco. La Casa Grande is a 137-foot high mansion packed with art treasures and surrounded by 120 acres of fecund gardens, Greek and Roman style terraces and pools, fountains and extravagant Renaissance guest houses. When he invited people to stay — usually film stars — they pranced between the white marble statues. The slender palms and orange trees to the whirt of home-movie cameras. William Randolph's soaring fantasy spreads richly over La Cuesta Encantada – the enchanted hill - its twin ivory coloured lowers beseeching admiration from the drivers on Route One of the glorious Californian coast a few miles to the west. Hearst Castle, as it is now better known, is an elaborate alabaster and marble memorial 10 what must have been bis lusty yearning for European and Mediterranean civilization. The treasures, though, are real enough and nothing was left to chance. As a smart-suited guide explained, the Gothic and Renaissance tapestries inside the mansion fitted the walls so perfectly because the walls were constructed to fit the tapestries.

We saw, too, some of the publishing millionaire's juddering home movies, fading images of Clarke Gahle, Carole Lombard and Charlie Chaplin cavorting in the sun-burnt grounds and heard the story of one starlet who refused a visit to such a remote place in case she was attacked by Indians. Finally persuaded, she arrived at the main gate at night to be surrounded by Hearst's staff, on horseback and dressed as Apaches, sent down to frighten the pompous wits out of her.

Hearst started building in 1919 on one of the lushest, greenest ranges of hills on that stretch of the coast. As a fantasy it predates Disneyland by a good 30 years. Hearst Castle was presented to the State of California in 1958, seven years after his death, and now tens of thousands of visitors eagerly pay $8 for a conducted tour, to traipse the Doge's Suite, the Celestial Suite, the Gothic Study Subtlety and discretion and Library, to admire the tap-estries, the fine wood carvings, the huge French and Italian fire mantels, the silver collection, the Persian rugs and Roman mosaics. When Hearst could not replicate, he bought the real thing.

Although I started my Californian motoring tour 250 miles further south in Los Angeles, I regarded Hearst Castle as the gateway 10 the part of the state I was to most enjoy – the beautiful t00-mile long Big Sur coastline to trendy Carmel, Steinheck's Monterey, north to San Francisco and then east into the Sierra Nevada for some crisp, tingling mountain air.

Carmel is a swish, expensive little town of bistros and galleries and marks the entrance to a beautiful diversion on the way to Monterey through the pines, cypress groves and private estates of the Del Monte Forest. At its western edge, along the rocky beaches, seals, sealions and sea otters roll in the spume of the surf.

As I left for Monterey, the clear blue skies were beginning to darken with storm clouds and the Pacific was doing a passable imitation of the North Sea on a winter's day. I made straight for Cannery Row, sure in the knowledge that I was about to be disappointed.

The former sardine canning area had moved John Steinbeck to write: "Cannery Row is a poem, a grating noise, a quality of light, a lone, a hahit, a nostalgia, a dream". That was some time ago and now it just packs tourists.

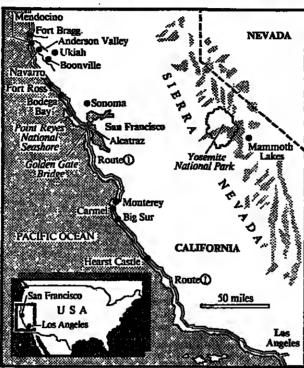

I looked in vain for some trace or memory of Doc Ricketts, Dora's bordello (I did not like to ask) and Lee Chong's grocery, but found only canneries converted into shops, restaurants and trinket stalls. On nearby Fisherman's Wharf I watched theseals and sealions crash about among the yachts and fishing boats and fight for sleeping space on the timber superstructure beneath the wharf.

I was told it was impossible to find anything even slightly bad about San Francisco. I can understand why, although the city was lashed by torrential rain for most of the time I was there and Alcatraz Island and the Golden Gate Bridge made only brief appearances through the swirling mist drifting across the bay.

The storms that were drowning the city in rain were dumping several fect of late spring snow in the Sierra Nevada about five hours driving to the east, and I was unable to reach my next location, Mammoth Lakes, on the other side of the mountain range.

Mysteries that beckon beyond dark forests coast of California can be carly winter on State Highway One, 250 miles of switchback cliff and shore all the way from San Francisco Bay to the Oregon border. In the late afternoon the view out across the Pacific to the setting sun was brilliantly clear. The destination, just before dusk, was Fort Ross, the restored site of an Imperial Russian out-post established by fur trappers the year Napoleon reached Moscow. And it was time to leave because by 5pm northern California was dark.

On the coast road motels are scarce. One route lay inland, into the forests. The road lacked verges and often signs; it dipped to cross a succession of fast streams before starting to climb the coastal hills. And so it went for 40 night-time miles, every corner threatening an end to road, an impassable wall of pine, or worse until eventually it became a freeway lit by neon, the light of civilized America.

After the dark woods, Ukiah was a gaudy oasis, a working town of loggers and farmers with a latterday mixture of wine-makers and marijuana growers. Out of season the motels all showed their vacancy lights. On main street there was Ron de Voo's restaurant with down-home cooking and matronly waitresses out of Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore.

North from Ukiah is the Avenue of the Giants, 33 miles of towering redwoods. East is lake country and west is the ocean. Much of the terrain is only for serious backwoods people with boots and canoes and four-wheeldrive vehicles. But the stateowned forests and beaches are various and accessible to the more casual traveller: for me there was at least one sunny November afternoon on a great sandbar at the mouth of a small stream called Russian Gulch, on one side the surf and rocks, on the other a shallow sandy stream in which the silver birch and California oak trailed their branches.

Highway One runs out of San Francisco across the Golden Gate Bridge into the villa-spotted hills of Marin County, hot-tub-land, then down into an eeric valley astride the San Andreas Fault. Somewhere in the mantle beneath are the very plates whose friction causes the crust of California to move and quake continuously.

The road marks the boundary of the Point Reyes National Seashore, a peninsula out of geological time and place that has lumbered over the aeons from its original site off present-day Los Angeles. It is a mysterious terri-tory with sudden micro-climates. racing tides, desert fauna and English chalk cliffs thrown together.

Stopping on the highway is easy, to picuic, to watch the birds or examine the plants and trees. At the Sonoma Coast State Beach, a cliff path leads down to rockpools. Huge Pacific gulls watch as you poke among the starfish, urchins, sea cucumbers and kelp. It is an empty coast and settlements are spread out. Bodega Bay, the location of John Carpenter's creepy film, The Fog, is a small port with fish restaurants on the quay, Mendocino is rather precious, a little town of clapboard Victorian dwellings in the New England style.

Fort Bragg is preferable, with its smell of pine sap and the rumble of saws in its timber yards. Its harbour is down in the canyon where the Noyo River enters the ocean - a deep clear stream on which the branches brought down from the mountains battle with the fronds of kelp drawn in with in February and March to see the procession of grey whales up the California coast from their breeding grounds off Mexico.

From Mendocino the road back to Ukiah runs along the broad bottom of the Navarro River where the redwoods form a triumphal arch into the hills. Here the woods soon give way to meadow-land and beyond that, climbing up the valley sides, the russet leaves of late wines. This is Anderson Valley, one of the newest and most northerly of California's wine producing areas.

glowed in autumnal colours and the roadside fruit stands offered, even in November, fresh-picked apples and pumpkin. But you are warned to stay on the road round these parts and do your up-country exploring in the state parks. For Anderson Valley and out-of-the-way spots like it are in the "Emerald Triangle" where pot-growing is a $2.5 billion a year industry. All sweetness and light

Sweet peas are in the blood of the Unwin family. Their passion for the species Lathyrus odorata spans four genera-tions — since 1901, in fact, when William Unwin (a grower of cut flowers for Covent Garden market) discovered a bold new pink sweet pea.

The hloom was not only larger but the standard - the upright back petal - had a distinctly wavy edge. William named it Gladys Unwin for his eldest daughter and began the lineage. He started the seed firm which still bears the family name and devoted his energies to plant breeding and

Charles Unwin liked varieties which have a tendency to produce an extra petal (known as duplex flowers) which are anathema to purists but very pretty. A variety which does

Edward Bulwer-Lytton: house was his Victorian dream-castle

But back to the house Inside it is the most remarkable extravaganza of history and pseudo-history - a genuincly medieval house, in fact, but "done over" several times. What meets the eye is largely Victorian elaboration, with some later tidying-up.

The house has always been in the Lytton family, and it was the once-famous novelist Edward Bulwer-Lytton, best known for his best-selling blockbuster The Last Days of Pompeii, who finally transformed it into his Victorian dream-castle. But Sir Edwin Lutyens, the great Edwardian architect, who married into the family, also left his mark and some of Bulwer-Lytton's most extravagant decorative schemes have since been stripped away.

The great Banqueting Hall was once buried in Victoriana, but is now restored to its 17thcentury essentials. Everything is done in wood - now beautifully aged - and an elaborately carved screen and minstrel's gallery give an authentie medieval atmosphere.

There is no getting away from old Bulwer-Lytton at Knebworth. His study is as he left it, complete with the enormous "chibook" pipe he enjoyed smoking—and even a couple of skulls from Pompeii.

The rooms of Knebworth make a nice potted history of four centuries of interior design. But the most dazzling of . all is the State Drawing Room Victorian Gothic at its highest pitch, and virtually unaltered. The impact of all that detail and colour is stunning. Phoney-medieval of played. course - but when it's done with such verve, who's complaining?

Knebworth is full of reminders of other Lyttons, past and present — from the Elizabeth Lytton Bulwer who

An exuberant Victorian fantasy of everything a medieval house should be : the impressive exterior of Knebworth House demolished three wings of the house to save the rest and left behind a recipe for "Sirrup of Snails" (possibly a cough medicine), to the 1st Earl of Lytton, who was Viceroy of India, and the 2nd, who married the great beauty Pam-cia Plowden. The house is now owned by the Hon David Lytton Cobbold, who lives there with his family, and works wonders to keep the place going — even to the extent of bolding huge open-air pop concerts in the grounds. But Knebworth deserves to be known for itself, rather than as a place where the Rolling Stones once

Knebworth House is open Tues-Sun until Sept 14, and on Sept 21 and 28. Park open 11am-5.30pm, house and gardens noon-5pm.

Old village awaits its new green

House makes a good two-pub stroll of about 1½ miles. You can start right opposite the station at a modernized "fam-ily pub", the Station Hotel, which has a well-equipped garden, a family conservatory and a very decent, cheap menu. After suitable refreshmen bear right from the station and walk through the long, strag-gling village of Old Knebworth, past several picturesque cottages, fields and woods, until you come to a fork in the road. Turning right will take you straight through to Knebworth House; turn left and you can go on to the Lytton Arms, an unpretentious pub, a bit rough and ready, but with a surprisingly good menu. Just next to the pub there will soon be a new village green, surrounded by houses carefully designed to look as though they've always been there. This was the brainchild of David Cohbold, the owner of Knebworth House, who felt the village needed a proper focal point, and invited architects to submit their ideas.

Knebworth has much to offer the Lutyens fan, including St Martin's Church, back on the B197 (turn left from the station). The original parish church, St Mary's, is a lovely old building in the grounds of Knebworth House. The Lytton Chapel inside - check-a-block with superb baroque monu-ments — was closed when I visited, owing to a dangeror ceiling. You can get some idea of it through a squint. It is rolling wooded hills, the Darent Valley is still unmistakably Samuel Palmer country. For a round-trip sampler, start by Shoreham church (well worth a look). Keep to the wide path through the fields, though it will eventually steer you back on to the main road for a short stretch.

will see you over the river, near a mysterious miniature windmill. Follow the back road beside hop-fields, then the river path along Lallingstone Castle, with its Tudor gateway, and Lulling-stone Roman Villa. Round under a fine viaduct and into Eynsford, a picture-postcard village with a lovely grouping of bridge, church and pub. Plenty of other pubs, too, and the remains of a chanky Norman castle.

There is too much traffic but lots of good-looking houses, including Willow Cot-tage where Graham Sutherand lived in the 1930s. The long lane up from the station gives fine views and the footpath off it leads you through woods, fields and a rifle range (keep a sharp eye for the red flag).

The way becomes confusing towards the end as paths multiply and signs disappear but you should soon be back in Shoreham. Take a look at the Water House, where Palmer lived, before heading for the Olde George or the King's Arms. Then a relaxed stroll round Shoreham, 2 beautiful village even now.

EATING OUT

Points of style for designer dining

Jonathan Meades finds a refreshing

oasis in a desert of nothingness

"Le style est l'homme même", in other words it's his essence. his fingerprint, the manifestation of bis uniqueness. But Buffon's aphorism is two centuries old and now, of course, style means something different. It means the very

It signifies off-the-peg quirks and mannerisms out of a can. It has absolutely nothing to do with essence, with the revelation of self. You need only think of "style whose nerveless prose is littered with borrowed tics and nicked gimmicks, of 'style magazines" which are all wrapping and no gift.

The vast majority of restaurants which serve the denizens of this post-literate world are inst another medium for the transmission of designer-

The important things are these: the tah should be out of all proportion to the meal; the waiters should look like Jean Gabin playing a waiter in a stylish" film (one made in the "stylish" 1930s or 1940s); the punters should be either

The food is gutsy and generous incredibly famous (have had their photo in The Face, have sung backing vocals with The Jesus and Mary Chain) or fairly famous (have "written" for The Face, bumped amps for The Jesus and Mary Chain). Most important: decor is all, food is nothing.

This neat and tidy formula is complicated by a place like Orso. The place is certainly one of recondite make-believe: it pretends to be a timeless (1950s, say) basement in Milan or Turin. But the food is very good: thankfully, it ignores the cliches of London-Italian catering and goes in for something closer to north Italian bome cooking pizzas, for example, are made with pastry rather than dough. But here I am talking grub when I should be telling you that the waiters (who are efficient and well-mannered) do indeed look like models pretending to be Gabin or the young Barrault; that the floor is marble parquet, that the sand-coloured walls are hung with black-and-white photos taken on the sets of neo-realist films, that there's a bar with a porpbyry top, that there's much grey panelling which recalls Milanese architecture of the early 1950s, that the manager's dog-tooth suit was in an early 1960s cut, that the plates are homespun (and available at Divertimenti). that the bundles of black that ambulated past my table now and again were simply my fellow diners in their wantonly unstructured clothes.

There weren't many them. The place was threequarters empty; I'm sure this is because, as I say, the food doesn't fit the formula. It's too gutsy, too generous - not the kind of stuff yon toy with while striking interesting positions. It is that of a scrious restaurant, possibly the most original Italian restaurant in

There is a filling starter of mozzarella fried in breadcrumbs rather than between slices of bread which is the more usual Italian practice; there's another of a pepper leaf called arugula with prosciuttn and leaves of parmesan: all the ingredie were sound quality, and the oil in the (elegant) vinaigrette was virginal enough.

What is described as a small pizza is in fact quite a big pizza and made with fresh, though unskinned tomatoes. Our main courses tended to be a bit on one note: ealfs bver with onions, sweetbreads with shallots, chicken with olives and tomatoes. The rusticity of these dishes might be mitigated a little. Vegetables are served lukewarm, as in Lombardy. There are no potatoes, which is silly, nor is there bread - concessions, no doubt, to the designer lobby. Someone should think again.

Sweets include a dentistfriendly cake of gooey chocolate, meringue, hazelnuts, nut brittle etcetera. Or you can dunk not very nice almond biscuits in Vin Santo, which is the sweet wine of Chianti and not a notably good traveller. With the meal we drank a classy 1977 Valpolicella from Tedeschi. Two will pay £50.

Orso, 27 Wellington Street, London WC2 (01-240 5269). Open Mon-Sat, noon-

GUEST COOK

Impromptu invitations for simple meals

Over the next three weeks notable chefs will describe what they like to cook off duty. The series is opened by ROBIN and MARION JONES, whose restaurant, Croque-en-Bouche in Malvern Wells, is the smallest to boast a Michelin rosette a really husy "slog" in the basil. restaurant, one of us will say "Why don't we invite the soand-so's round for a meal?" and we do.

At home, we like to serve simple food which does not involve dashing into the kitchen every few minntes preparation ahead being the key. We cook and serve together rather than following our professional roles of cook

We prefer a number of small courses, starting usually with a tureen of soup. At a recent dinner for eight this was a lettuce, pea and savory soup, light and summery. It's a favourite, and we used the first of our mangetout from the garden as a garnish.

Some cold anti-pasti followed: mushrooms sautéed in with ground coriander seed, seasoned, with lemon juice and coriander leaves; garden courgettes with red pimento and onion as a sort of ratatouille; and green flageolet ceans, with Florence fennel in a mustard vinaigrette.

This meal was a good occasion to experiment with a 'parsley-shadow' pasta best.

Masochistie though it may sauced with salmon, tomato seem, sometimes at the end of and lots of green and purple

The next course was a selection of grilled meats: small steaks of beef fillet, calves' liver and pork loin (marinated in Hoi Sin, garlic and soy), with some spicy Algerian-style merguer sausages, cooked quickly on a cast-iron Le Creuset grill. There were plain boiled new potatoes and a simple yoghurt and cucumber sauce. The cast-list for the homegrown salad included red lettuces, endives, mesclan and rocket, with sorrel, chervil, nasturtium and garlic-chives forgetting not marvellously frilly Red Lollo, named after Gina Lollobrigida! The salad was dressed with extra vergine olive oil.

A taste of cheese, including the Double Berkeley from nearby Dymock, was followed by a summer pudding of local raspberries, hlackeurrants, cherries and gooseberries. We aim for minimum bread and maximum fruit, and stick in a enerous dollop of Crème de Cassis liqueur. This was the first of the summer, and the

Serves eight 35g (11/20z) unsalted butter 2 large Webbs lettuce, washed and roughly shredded bunch spring onions.

1 clove gartic, chopped tablespoon flour 1.35kg (3lb) fresh peas 2 sprigs summer savory and 2 saga leaves, tied 1.2 litres (2 pints) ham stock A little cream, a few

mangetout peas and extra summer savory for garnish

Shell peas. Melt butter in large saucepan and soften spring onions and garlic without browning. Put ham stock in another saucepan and bring to boil; add peas and herbs; cook for a further three minutes. Meanwhile, add lettuce to spring oninns and garlic; stir until cooked down. Add a little black pepper. Pour peas and liquid over lettuce mixture, bring to boil and remove from heat. Liquidize soup and pass through a mouli-legumes.

To serve, heat gently, thin-ning down and adjusting seasoning as necessary. Garnish with cream, tiny raw mangetout peas and chopped summer savory.

Perfection behind the packaging

cover" was one of those silly truisms that we all had to learn in the classroom but bow pertinent it is to wine and wine labels.

Garish, lurid labels are often wrapped around some of the best bottles. It was therefore with an open mind that I approached Alsace Maree, a Zind Humbrecht Alsace wine whose red and green bacchanalian cartoon label is an excellent example of French kitsch at its best.

And I'm glad I dld. For this
'84 Edelzwicker is not the usual basic blend of boring Chasselas and Sylvaner but a 100 per cent Muscat wine. More than that, this delicious deep golden wine with its elegant, dry fruity-flowery taste, is the finest Edelzwicker that I or anyone else is likely to taste. (£45.08 per case including delivery or £3.75 a bottle from The Pavilion Wine Company, Finsbury Circus Gardens, London EC2.)

Choosing red wines for August, our traditional boliday month, is rather more difficult than selecting whites. Lightly chilled Beaujolais is the obvinus chnice but while the splendid 1985 crus Beaujolais are still on everyone's lists it is silly not tn buy. But do not expect these wines to be cheap: even supermarket crus Beaujolais is now almost £5. The Pavilion Wine Company again have an excellent

'85 Chiroubles, Domaine du Clos Verdy from Georges Boulon. Its brilliant crimsonpurple colour and vibrant raspberry and redcurrant-like fruit is a fine example of this. the lightest of the nine Beaujolais crus. (£67.51 a case including delivery or £5.62 a bottle.)

With the weak pound and increased European wine prices, the UK wine trade is having a difficult year and that must be one reason why so many wine merchants are running special summer sales. The Hungerford Wine

Company's Summer 1986 Sale looks especially appeal-ing. Magnums of the Louis Roederer Extra Quality nonvintage champagne, now no longer obtainable, are on offer for just £24.80 and their useful summer halves of Monsieur Bailly's highly regarded Pouilly Blanc Fume, Les Griottes are priced at only £2.95 each.

Given that Bollinger '66 was served at the Duke and Duchess of York's wedding, royalists may well like to try Bollinger's 1975 RD, or recently disgorged, champagne: it is textbook Bollinger at its best, with a deep buttercupgold colour and rich, meaty style. £26.25 a bottle.

The Hungerford Wine Company also have dozens of different clarets on offer. Write to them at 128 High Street, Hungerford, Berkshire for their sale list. Another good cut-price champagne offer this month comes from The Champagne House at 15 Dawson Place. London W2. They are selling three different Blanc de Blancs champagnes at specially reduced prices until next Friday. My favourite amongst the trio is Albert Le Brun's Blanc de Blancs, whose smoky bouquet and rich, gutsy taste is a revelation. It comes at £9.98 a bottle instead of £10.94. Jane MacQuitty

Union of volatile emotions

ozart: Le nozze di Figaro opp/Hendricks/Baltsa/van am/Raimondi. Academy of St Martin-the-Fields/Marriner. Philips 416 0-2 (3 CDs, also black disc and assette) ir Neville Marriner's operatic repviory is as yet limited - and may it the subject of the second state of the second second state of the second state of the second state of the second state of the second second state of the second second state of the second s in the Almavivas and the Figures. arbiere of a couple of years ago with Nozze di Figaro which is going to be released for many of the same asons. There is Sir Neville's own pproach, always energetic but rarely ver-stated and certainly never slack.

There is an excellently picked cast. There is an exceeding in a constant most of all there is a constant the state of all there is a constant the state of the therplay between each and every one of the performers, with the ping-pong to the performers and every one that the performers with the ping-pong to the performers and the ping-pong emotion nipping to the performers are the ping-pong to the ping

C Sauly on the same and the same wenting his neer on others, including poor herubing in "Non più andrai". The Agriner's accompaniment of the receding recitative, where as so often Mozart most of the feelings are the supposed before the aria actually taris.

Ruggero Raimondi's Count is qually volatile suavity itself when he wants to be persuasive as in the Perdono", which even the most uffronted Countess could not resist, but full of fury in "Hai gia vinta la ausa". Raimondi may have to fudge he occasional note, not in Dam-are-two of the most powerful opponents on record in this opera.

The women are scarcely less impressive Agnes Baltsa has moved from Rosina in the Barbiere to Cherubino here and has given that silken boy a quivering adolescent sexuality whether in the high-speed

Romantic note: encounter in the garden, from the cover of Philips's new digital recording of Le nozze di Figaro

"Non so più" or in "Voi che sapete" where, as he tells us himself, he is all. a-tremble ("lo sono si tremante"). Lucia Popp's Countess is creamy and dreamy to start with - "Porgi amor" almost always goes better on record than on stage - before summoning up those reserves of resourcefulness she must have had to marry a man like

My own reserves centre mainly on Barbara Hendricks's Susanna, always cleanly sung hut lacking the charm of a Grist or a Mathis. By the standards of this set it is a cool interpretation. But with performances of the strength of Robert Lloyd's Bartolo and Felicity Palmer's Marcellina this is a Figaro in every way worthy of celebrating the 200th anniversary of that first performance in the Burgtheater. Places must remain on the shelf for Giulini, Böhm and Davis, but for those who want the present-day team in first class sound, Marriner is the choice.

As Claudio Ahbado Icaves La Scala to take up his position as music director of the Vienna State Opera in the aniumn, DG have just reissued on CD a notable range of opera recordings he made with the forces of the Milan house. Pride of place goes to Verdi: Simon Boccanegra (415 692-2, 2 CDs) with Macbeth (415 688-2, 3CDs), both recorded in the late 1970s. Ballo (415 685-2 2 CDs) came a few years later and found the male cast, led by Domingo and Bruson in notable form. All are highly recommended.

EMI too have been probing into the Scala archive and their latest CD transfer is Puccini's Manon Lescaut (CDS 7 473938, 2 CDs). It is a onevoman set, but since that woman is Callas enthusiasts will need no further recommendation. But the cast assembled around her was one of the weaker ones among her major complete recordings and the EMI engineers have not been able to do much with the distant sound of the orchestra under Serafin.

iner's. Here the problem is not one of vocal quality and power but rather one of style. Robert Tear's "Benedictus" is woefully pedestrian, and there are far too many gratuitous swoops, while Samuel Ramey's "Quoniam Tu solus Sanctus" sounds equally

But these are small prices to pay for a reading that is otherwise vigorous if anashamedly ripe. All the other obbligatos are well done, while the Chorus of the Academy of St Martin in the Field sing crisply and accurately. Speeds are generally on the fast side. and articulation well pointed, sometimes even affectedly so, ever at the e work's essential spirituality.

Purcell's only true opera. Dido and Acneas, is just as great in a slightly different way, and Jessye Norman was bound-to have recorded it sooner or later. In some ways one wishes she had not. It is a superlative voice, of course, hut one has to question an approach that turns Dido into a character of quite such supercilious nobility, ignoring the more human side of her nature that Emma Kirkby, on the other hand, emphasizes too much. The perfect balance

One advantage of the present version, however, is Thomas Allen's Aeneas. No fool, this, but a thinking, sensitive person simply caught in confusing circumstances. The orchestral sound is what you would expect from-Leppard: rich, fulsome, wholly of the 19th century; very nice if von like that sort of thing in

He is best known for his radio signature tunes, for In Town Tonight and Music While You Work, for "By the Sleepy Lagoon", which still in-troduces Desert Island Discs, and his "Dambusters March" which made the hit parade during the 1950s.

But these were only a small sample from the jolly, rousing and evocative pieces penned by Eric Coates, a doctor's son from Nottinghamshire. He was born 100 years ago and radio, which made him a celebrity, appropriately leads the centenary tributes.

Eric Coates - King of Light Music (Radin 2, Tues, 9-9.55pm) is the first of a four programmes by his son, Austin. It is the story of a precocious musical talent, who made his first coocert appearance at the age of 10 resisted parental pressure to Stephen Pettitt become a bank clerk to study

The fortepiano, an 1820 Viennese Broadmann, snatches a good deal of the limelight in Ernst Haefliger's new recording of the Schwanengesang. As in their earlier partnership in the Winterreise it is the fingers of Jorg Ewald Dahler which provide the performance's chief raison d'être: in the keen bite of a single sforzando, and the precise balance between bass chords and treble figuration in for instance, "Die Stadt". "Der Doppelgänger" creates

ing bridge power has been one of the features of the last decade. In the early 1970s, the Polish team would invariably start well but fade in the closing stages of a championship. However, they broke the ice with a win in the 1978 Rosenblum Cup, and strolled away with the European Championship in 1981.

Ye1 Poland's notable improvement in teams of four competition is overshadowed by outstanding achievement in International Pairs events, where the method of scoring seems especially suited to their approach to the game. Piotr Gawrys is one of several talented young Polish players. In the Royal Viking player of the year competition, he suggests that many players mistakenly consider the opening lead merely as a matter of "putting the ball in play". He rightly argues that with a n just a few days' time Edinburgh will be transformed. On every wall will be a poster, on every pavement inch a person, io every school hall a performance and in every bar a pseuds' corner as the 40th Edinhurgh Festival Fringe erupts over the city.

Flurry with the Fringe as tops

and more unpredictable scenes at the Edinburgh Festival

For three weeks, as the official Edinburgh Festival proceeds more staidly, huodreds of Fringe groups will display their artistic wares, the truly famous alongside the truly infamous - and the truly dreadful - in what has become the most exhilarating and absurd arts festival in the world. Behind the spontaneity that is synonymous with the Fringe, however, lies an immense feat of co-ordination, the responsibility this year of a tall, slight, but indefatigable 26-year-old - Mhairi McKenzie-Robinson, the first woman Fringe administrator. Sunday morning finds her in a tiny room above the Fringe box-office, breakfastless hut full of good cheer, in hright pink dungarees that put the grey weather to shame. Looking out over the Royal Mile, where the pavement is still visible, she admits she once made the mistake of during the Festival Fringe. "But I couldn't stay away. By the time it got to July I thought, this is crazy, I can't bear not to be io Scotland - so I came back."

Once back she stayed, becoming full-time assistant to her predecessor, Michael Dale, in 1982 and administrator herself at the end of last year. Born and bred in Edinburgh, her working association with the Fringe goes back much further - to 1977, the summer before she started a psychology degree at Durham. Then, as a "stroppy 17-year-old", she was given a part-time job by administrator Alistair Moffat, "Part-time joh" proved something of a cuphemism, "He said, 'Look, here's a desk, here's the phone, here's a pile of envelopes, I'm going out, and just left me.

The Edinburgh Fringe dif-fers from almost every other festival — including the Edin-burgh Festival — in that it has no artistic director. Since it began in 1947, when eight groups formed a spootaneous alternative to the first official Festival, its growth has been autonomous, undirected and, so far, unchecked. This year more than 900 shows. "It's doubled since I have been here. It's quite iocred-ihle", says Mhairi, restoring a pink hair grip, which she had been using for emphasis, to its rightful place.

lo priociple anybody can join in — and anybody and everybody does. Mhairi cites the case of one enterprising soul who came two years ago as a spectator and was so enthralled by the whole atmosphere that he is back this year as a performer.

back of every Fringe performer's mind is the dream of "heing discovered" and the roll-call of early performers on the Fringe jocludes names like Derek Jacobi, Jonathan Miller (now Fringe chairman), Tom Stoppard, Rowan Atkinsoo (back in Edinburgh this year), and Julie Covington.

ceiling on the number of participants.

On this subject Mhairi is more than usually emphatic and the pink hair grip comes back into play. "I think it would be absolutely wrong to As the Fringe cootinues to grow, it is amidst muttered criticisms: that it has become too professional and is seen only as a springboard to television; or that the administrator should exercise artistic chance to experiment, to be-

Meanwhile, she remains trapped inside the box-office by a constant stream of idiosyocratic requests from performers and public alike. And while she may not have designs on the direction the Fringe should take, she has definite ideas on where the box-office and the Fringe Society should go - several hundred yards up the road to desperately needed larger premises. "For the last three years my dream has been to see this organization move offices. I would like to be here when that happeos."

Mysteries beyond reason

In a culture devoted to material prosperity and dominated by rational technology, both highly desirable achievements, the contemplative wisdom of the mystic tends to be neglected, and even distrusted by some scholarly minds; for, as so many of the mystics af firm, it is through the inactivity of his reasoning powers that man is united by his highest faculty to Him who is unknowable.

Thus, by knowing nothing he knows that which is beyond knowledge. Such wisdom acquired by experience in a sphere beyond, but not cootra to, reason is sometimes perceived as dangerous nonsense.

From one point of view it is just that. It is indeed "non-sense", that is beyond the perception of the limited world of human senses. So are many other things that exist, even in the world of sensation itself, like the colour world of the bees, the smell world of dogs and the direction finding ability of migratory birds. The world of human senses in which reason is active, is very limited and even when human reason expands into abstract philosophical concepts like justice, we are told by men who know that "God's thoughts are not our thoughts nor God's way our ways".

the limitations of human reason and understanding. Also, when we rationalize about love, we are reminded that "the love of God is breader than the neasure of man's mind" Evidently, the world of "non-sense"

That is to say, there is a reality beyond is as real to the mystic as is the world of sense and reason to all. To enter the world beyond reason, the world of 'non-sense" is also dangerous for it challenges existing beliefs and can lead to psychological and physical persecu-tion. It is also dangerous in a deeper sense. The Homilies of Origen tell us that "the Saviour saith he who is near me is near the fire", and while fire warms and gives light it also burns. This coocept that contact with divine mysteries in the sphere beyond reason has a dangerous quality is almost lost in Western Christianity, but is still found in the Orthodox churches of the East. Western Christians tend to lack a sense of awe, of holy fear - one of the gifts of the Spirit - in the presence of divine myslery, overlooking the fact that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom".

One of the traditional aims of Christian worship is to express through the liturgy, the ritual and the symbols of faith, awe and holy fear in the presence of the Mysterious, thus bearing witness to realities beyond, but not contra to, reason. At the same time, scholars within the church with their theology provide a steadying influence on the

The fiery inspired visionary prophet, with his message to the heart, and the conservative scholarly priest theolo-gian, speaking to the head, supplement and need each other, lest the one becomes a deluded fanatic and the other progratic rationalist preserving an institution in which the fire of the Spirit no longer burns.

This tension between the mysticism of the heart and the rationalism of the mind is permanent in any living faith and prevents it exploding into chaos or withering into sterility. A living faith can only survive as long as it contains within itself the dynamic of "dangerous" "non-sense" and the counter balance of cool reason, which prevents the supra-rational degenerating into the irrational.

Any church at any period in history is influenced by the pschological climate of its time and by the thought forms of those to whom it ministers. This is necessary if it is to keep "in touch", but at the same time it also has a duty to be true to its vocation and to express those aspects of eternal truths which are unfashionable.

In this age of materialism and high technology, reason is pre-eminent to current thought while the mystical beyond reason element of the faith tends to be over-shadowed.

True, at the ordination of priests we. with the wisdom of the ages, still pray "Come Holy Ghost our souls inspire, and lighten with celestial fire", so that we are not altogether oblivious of the fact that freedom and prosperity are not the whole of the good news of God's kingdom.

Nevertheless, we need continually to ask whether as Christians we are bearing witness to the mysteries of faith beyond reason and thus meeting the spiritual as well as the ethical and social needs of our contemporaries. .

Men are not bringry only for freedom and bread, as the growth and disciplice of esoteric cults show. Even in a materialistic and rational age the human soul needs to worship and to find in the church's littingy, not so much participation and understanding as the spirtual nourishment of divine mysteries and "the peace that passeth all understanding".

So, sometimes there is the need to say in the words of the ancient Greek hymn from the Liturgy of St James:

"Let all mortal flesh keep silence and with fear and trembling stan Ponder nothing earthly minded, for with blessing in His hand, Christ our God to earth descendith our full homage to demand'

The archbishop intervened, called on the officer in charge of operations, and reminded him of his duty to the civilian population. An order was given to cancel the plans, and years later the officer, whose name the archhishop refused to divulge, wrote thanking him for his encouragement to act humanely. In 1950, Confalonieri was translated to the titular sec of Nicopolis and Nestum on appointment as Secretary of the Sacred Congregation for Universities and Seminaries. He was made a cardinal by Pope John XXIII in 1958 with the title of St Agnes-withoutthe-Walls.

He also served as prefect of the Vatican Congregation for Catholic Education, and prefect of the Vaucan Congregation for Bishops.

In 1977, hy now in his 80s, Confalonieri was chosen as dean of the College of Cardinals, a utular post in which he represented his fellow cardimarked particularly by the nals at official church retreat of German forces functions.

From Juan Carlos Gumucio

Under increasing pressure from Syria, President Gemayel yesterday unexpectedly offered an olive branch to Damascus and to Muslim foes who demand his resignation and proposed a joint quest for a new formula to end the Lebanese civil war.

"I personally call on brother President Hafez el-Assad to continue what he has already begun and pledged over the years, the President said during a ceremony - boy-cotted by Muslim military and political leaders - to commemorate the Army's day in Christian east Beirut.

"The pitfalls that faced his and our efforts in the past could serve as a lesson for the future," he said.

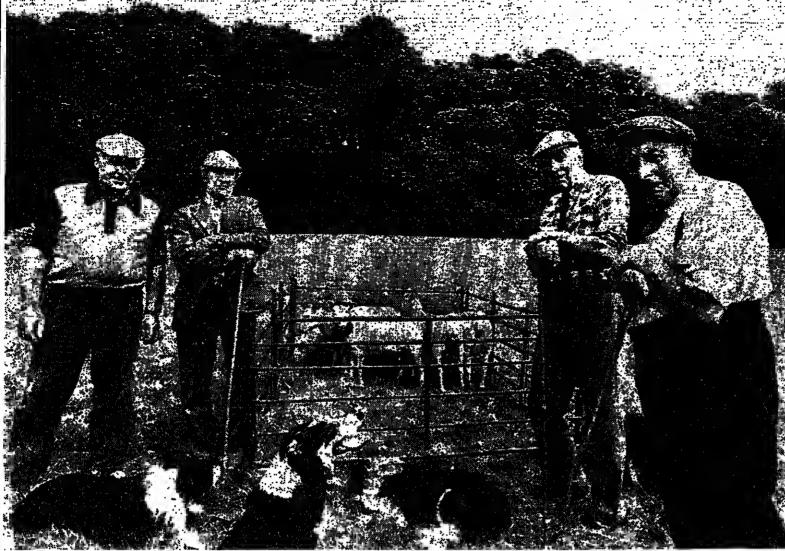

Hours afterwards a Lebanese Army soldier was killed and 25 civilians were injured when a small bomb exploded near a factory in the Christian suburb of Dora. It followed two car bomb attacks in east and west Beirut early this week which claimed 55 lives.

Mr Gemayel's clear call for Syrian help came amid reports that Syria overnight had sent a new batch of soldiers to west Beirut, where nearly 500 Syrian troops and plainclothes agents are helping Muslim units of the Lebanese Army to Iry to restore order under a Damascus-sponsored "secur-ity plan" launched a month

Syrian military presence in the Lebanese capital has caused widespread suspicion and bitter criticism among some Christian politicians who see Syria's policies in Lebanon as a threat to national sovereignty.

The President's words embodied the first conciliatory gesture towards Damascus after months of strain provoked by the presidential veto to a tripartite peace accord signed in Damascus by Lebanon's most powerful Christian and Muslim militias in December.

The accord, never applied, sought to give Muslims more

The Department of Trade and Industry announced in Pretoria that it was giving importers of Zimbabwean products "timeous" warning that special import licences will be needed from next Friday, August 8.

It said in a statement: "It is incumbent upon the South African Government to protect local commerce and industry and to safeguard the sources of supply of their normal requirements.

Against this background and in view of other developments coocerning South Africa, the Government has imports from Zimbabwe." It would enable the Government to monitor the volume and nature of Zimbabwean imports, the statement said.

South Africa is by far Zimbabwe's biggest trading partner and the conduit for the bulk of its overseas trade. Two-way trade between the countries was worth 382 million rand (£100 million) last

In 1984, South Africa took 18.3 per cent of Zimbabwe's exports and supplied 19.3 per cent of its imports.

It is estimated that between 68 and 90 per cent of Zimbabwe's exports go through South Africa and between 65 and 80 per cent of imports. Zimbabwe's oatural outlet to the sea, Beira in decided to introduce a system of import licensing on all about ooe teoth of Zimbabwe's annual exportimport volume, according to a British study.

A spokesman for Dr Dawie de Villiers, South Africa's Minister of Trade and Industry, said importers of Zimbabwean goods would be able to get licences without any trouble He said: "This measure does not imply an embargo on imports from Zimbabwe and should by no means be interpreted as a deviation from South Africa's official trade policy not to unnecessarily intervene in ioternational trade."

Earlier yesterday the Min-ister of Manpower, Mr Pietie de Plessis, warned that strong action was planned against the estimated 1.7 Million workers from neighbouring states who were in South Africa illegally.

When to apply water to plants, how often and bow much are questions that need careful thought. Crops like soft fruits and peas and beans - which are mainly water anyway - need watering from the time the pods or fruits have set and are swelling applying it before then may produce leaf growth but does not swell the crop. Much the same applies to potatoes. Apply at least 1½ gallons to the square yard, two or three times a week in dry spells.

Gather and dry herbs for winter use, cut eryngiums, statice and other everlasting flowers when they have just opened and are at their best. Dry and store them in plastic bags to keep free of dust notil required for winter use. Bid likely as 14% of RHM is sold

A full-scale takeover bid for Ranks Hovis McDougall, the Mothers Pride and Mr Kipling Cakes bakery group, looked imminent last night after a crucial 14.6 per cent stake in the business was bought by the Australian food producer Goodman Fielder.

The shareholding had been picked up for £107 million from S & W Berisford, the commodity group, which has long been upped as a seller. The price put a value on the shares of about 25gp. They shot up 34p on the stock

Cautious welcome for new MFA

By Our City Staff

Negotiators from 54 nations agreed yesterday on an amended multifibre arrangement (MFA) which will run for five years, the third exten-sion since the measure was introduced in 1974.

Despite prolonged oppo-sition from China, the US succeeded in having the "new" natural fibre ramic covered by the MFA, but did not maintain its original de-mand that silk be included.

The original surge (of imports) clause has been re-placed by a procedure permitting importing nations to apply restrictions selec-tively following consultations with the exporting country. More specific data will be required as justification for restrictions, including the state of the importer's domes-

In Britain the British Textile Confederation, gave a cautious welcome to the MFA's renewal but said the European Economic Community must now stick to its negotiating mandate in draw-ing up the bilateral agreements with individual countries.

Under the new agreement, more liberal conditions will be offered to Third World exporters who open their markets to industrialized nations' textile and garment exports. Special consideration will be accorded new and small exporters. The new MFA also includes, at the EEC's request. an injunction against copying styles, models and designs.

Not covered by the new protocol are jute, sisal, coir and similar fibres "traded in significant quantities before 1982" and used in sacking, mats, carpets and luggage.

While no specific period is mentioned, a new clause, proposed by developing country producers, says the MFA should be ultimately phased

The MFA applies to about balf of the $100 billion (£67 billion) annual trade in textiles and clothing, including $15 billion of imports by industrialized countries from Third World sources.

The US negotiators were under extreme pressure to achieve an accord before August 6 when the House of Representatives will again vote on the Jenkins Bill, calling for drastic reductions in imports of Third textiles.

The vote, which needs a two-thirds majority to overturn the Presidential veto, is expected to be very close. year and the industry is winning support for protectionist

Property assets key to Highams bid

Highams' £37 million hid for control of the Manchester to take its 625p-a-share cash control of the Manchester Ship Canal Company is the first contested bid to take over a statutory authority ready sold their shares. that even long City memories can recall.

The attractions for Highams, the privately-owned company of Mr John Whittaker, the chairman of Peel Holdings, the developer of retail warehouses, are Manchester Ship's property assets. These were last valued at £30.8 million. The plum in the portfolio is the 300-acre Barton site - only four miles from Manchester's city centre - which would have tremendous potential as retail space. Highams' attempts to wrest control of the Manchester Ship Canal Company from its present board have been complicated by the strange nature of the shareholdings as well as by the fact that the company still has statutory obligations to fulfil.

Of the 21-strong board, 11 are members of the Labourcontrolled Manchester City Council which is opposed to the idea of entrepreneurial property developers capitalizing on the assets of a developers largely moribund industry. And they will object to the idea of developing a £100 million out-of-town shopping centre so close to the city. But they hold no shares in Manchester Ship. Highams had been gradually increasing its voting and non-voling shareholdings in the company until it reached a point where a bid was automatically triggered. The com-plicated structure of Manchester Ship means that Highams has had to reduce its shareholding to 48.48 per cent at the request of the Takeover Panel. It sold its surplus shares yesterday at 281p. Its hid will go through once it has 50 per cent of the company. But this will only give it about 31 per cent of the votes. The Takeover Panel has undertakings from Highams that it will break down its shareholding through cominees to obtain a majority of the voting rights once it has a majority shareholding. Highams has to convince small shareholders — many of them local families whose shares have been handed offer. Most of the institutional shareholders have al-

It is no coincidence that Manchester Ship's results have been brought forward a week and will appear on Monday. The board is continuing to tell shareholders to resist the bid outlined in Highams' offer document which went out yesterday.

It is likely that there will another revaluation of the property portfolio, designed to boost Manchester Ship's asset value in an attempt to thwart the Highams' hid - or at least force it to raise it.

Extel

Extel has not let the grass grow under its feet since seeing off the unwanted £170 million bid from Demerger Corporation, but any suggestion that its moves since April have been defensive are roundly rejected. Following the purchase of CRE Barber and CFE Publishing and the sale of Royds Advertising came yesterday's news of an expected large acquistion in the United States. At $40 million (£27 million) the Dealers Digest, a financial publishing and database operation, is the biggest acquisition yet made

The Dealers Digest is a private company and is being paid for by a vendor placing of 7.9 million shares at 330p to raise $38.5 million. The remaining $1.5 million will be paid in non-interest bearing notes in three years.

The vendors are retaining 1.6 million shares and 6.3 million have been conditionally placed with institutions.

Ordinary shareholders of Extel, including Mr Robert Maxwell, will be able to apply for the new shares, also at 330p, on a one-for-seven basis. The price looks quite a soip compared with Demerger's 400p cash bid and the price at which Mr Maxwell was most recently buying.

Last mooth Mr Maxwell succeeded in blocking a routine move by the board to ohtain shareholders' approval to issue new shares. Mr Maxwell has a 13.8 per cent stake and appears to influence a further 5 per cent. With turnover of $8.8 million and profit before tax of $2.1 million in the first 10 months of the current year to August 31, the Dealers Digest will make a significant impact on Extel.

The company remains in a net cash position and is well placed to make further acqusitions, but it will probably take it a good few months to absorb this one.

Cookson Group

Cookson Group, the metals industrial chemicals and ceramics group, continues to look for new acquisitions as part of its policy of finding industrial niches in which it can seize market leadership. But it still has problems in electronics.

The sector is only tottering out of a counter-cyclical trough although the effects of that on profitability are being more than offset by strong trading improvements.
particularly in tin.
This is the picture emerging as Cookson, operating on a calendar year, moves into its second half with analysts looking for a full-year pretax profits improvement of about 25 per cent or £85 million.

That compares with £67.6 million, up 27 per cent, last

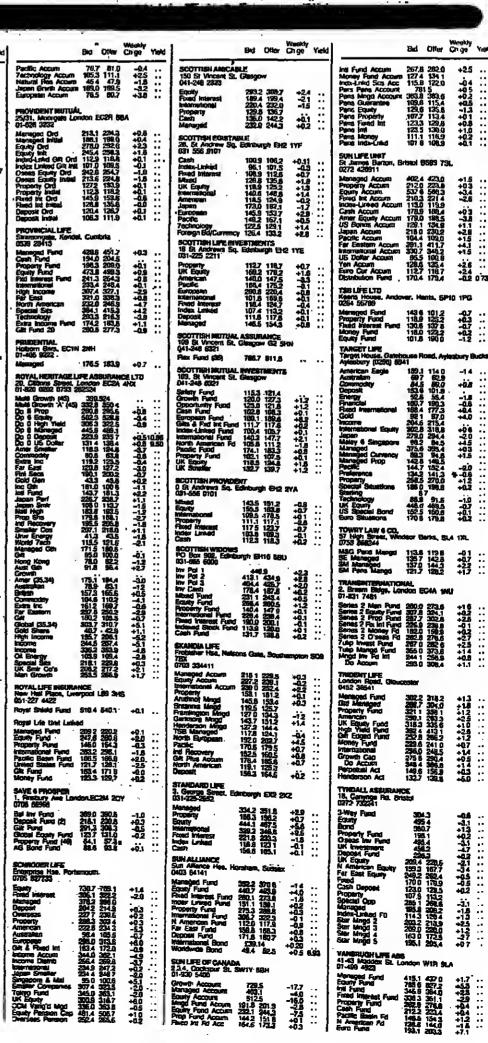

Cookson, after a rapid series of acquisitions, has about 60 businesses, with 35 per cent or more of its activities in the United States, about 25 per cent in Britain and as much again in the rest of Europe. It is looking mostly east to India and the Pacific rim for more growth.

The electronics sector downturn hit profits in the latter part of 1985. There has been some improvement this year but a marked recovery now looks likely in 1987. The company emphasizes that there have not been losses in electronics but reduced profitability.

Titanium dioxide, used to whiten paint, plastics and paper, is a sector of strong growth where profit margins are good and tin will be a boost, not only because prices have dropped, but because Cookson will profit from the new freedom to strike advantageous deals directly with producers.

the outcome of a number of worries troubling the market. The renewed pressure for sanctions against South Africa before this weekend's meeting of Commonwealth heads of government, the oil crisis and political and economic uncertainty have all left their mark on share prices over the past few weeks. The result has been that prices have staggered from one crisis to another while looking for a lead. This has proved too much for some of the bigger fund managers who

• Kleinwort Grieveson, the broker, expects Norton Opax, the printing and paper group, to relaunch its bid for its larger rival, McCorquodale, in October—if given the all-clear by the Monopolies Commission. have decided to wait for a clearer picture before committing any more of their funds.
Turnover was down to a trickle yesterday and share prices were left to their own devices. The FT index of 30 shares rose by 1.4 points to 1,273.4, while the broaderbased FT-SE 100 index edged.

Attempts to place up to 4 million shares (7 per cent) in International Leisure, the package tour group, at 118p each ended in failure when they were withdrawn because of poor conditions in the market

The bulk of the shares belonged to Mr Harry Goodman, the chairman, who owned 11.7 million shares at the last count, amounting to 23 per cent of the total. The rest were divided between various directors. The last share sale by directors was over a year ago. International Leisure lost 5p at 120p.

Ranks Hovis McDongall, the food manufacturer, leapt 34p to equal the year's high of 244p as it emerged that Mr John Elliott, chairman of Elders DXL, the Australian brewery, was involved in the sale of S & W Berisford's 14.6 per cent stake to a little-known Australian food group, Good-man Fielder, for £107 million.

The 41.33 million shares were sold ontside the market at about 258p a share leaving a lot of disgruntled jobbers and brokers scurrying about the marketplace after the news broke.

Berisford inherited its stake in RHM with its acquisition of British Sugar.

Mr Michael Ashcroft's Hawley Group has been buy-ing more shares in Brangreen, the industrial eleaning contracter which is the subject of an agreed, £26 million bid from BET. Hawley — un-changed at 98p — has paid up to 46.5p a share for an extra 730,000 shares. That compares with the BET cash offer of 45p a share.

Mr Ashcroft oow speaks for 13.025 million Brengreen shares, or 20 per cent of the total. But marketmen remain undecided about Hawley's intentions: Some are convinced Mr Ashcroft will launch a bid of his own, while others feel he will use his holding in Brengreen to try to force a higher price out of BET. Brengreen was unchanged at 46.5p as BET firmed 2p to A10p. Na-Swift Industries, the fire extinguisher manufacturer, where Hawley owns a near-30 per cent stake, improved by 10p to a fresh peak of 178p, still hoping for a full bid from Mr Ashcroft. Shares of Lincroft Kligour, the tailoring and investment holding company, returned from suspension 10p higher at 250p, after the market learnt that Priest Marians, the propment group, had paid just over 240p a share for 1.21 million shares, or 26.48 per cent of the total, belonging to Mr .JJ Steiner, a director of Lincroft,

COMMENT Kenneth Fleet

A whiff of twenties' deflation in the air fallen by 0.1 per cent in May. This may be just enough, allied with the in the global air. July unemployment figures, to sustain the faith of the prophets who, standing have important implications for maron a mountain of scepticism, claim to see a revival in the US growth rate in the second balf of the year. Un-employment dropped to 6.9 per cent last month, the third monthly fall on the trot and the lowest figure since

The key statistic, bowever, remains the US trade deficit which reached the monumental total of $150 billion and shows very little sign of diminishing.

The counterparts of the US balance of payments deficit are the substantial surpluses accruing to Japan, West Germany and the rest of Western Europe, which are returning to the US to finance the American deficit. As in the 1920s, when Britain could not continue to underwrite the interwar monetary system and the US was reluctant (until 1936) to do so, the US is no longer able to fill this role.

Having become a net debtor in 1985, the US is now dependent on net capital inflows to finance its domestic and external deficits. Neither Japan nor West Germany has any ambition to take the place in the system vacated by the US.

This is not the only parallel with the interwar years, as Tony Baron demonstrates in the July issue of Chase Manhattan Securities' Spotlight. In Britain, the theoretical approach of the Government's medium-term financial strategy, introduced in 1980, ordinary shares.

The agreement between the US and Japan over semicooductor chips is thought to be good news for Britain's electrooics companies. As a result, dealers reported a flurry of activity with demand for shares such as Bowthorpe, 20p higher at 535p, Diploma 205p. at Electrocomposeots 7p at 375p, Farnell Electronics 7pat 170p, International Signal 7p at 245p, following publication of its annual report, while BSR International on 88p, CASE Group on 82p and Cray Electionics on 320p, all added 5p each. Whispers of a bid also added 13p to Memec at 238p.

Lex Service, which reported an increase in interim pretax profits of 87 per cent to £14.8 million oo Thursday, is also expected to benefit from the deal. It has also just made an acquisition in the US for £9.1 million. The shares responded with a 7p rise to 309p.

The US index of leading indicators rose by 0.3 per cent in June, having orthodoxy that ruled in the 1920s and there is more than a whiff of deflation

The parallels and the atmosphere kets and those who use them. In the first place, as Mr Baron suggests, huge international payments imbalances mean highly volatile foreign exchange markets, where the US dollar will continue to depreciate until deep cuts are made in the US budget deficit. The second probability is that interest rates will fall.

This scenario of deflation and declining interest rates is favourable. for bond markets in general, though not all fixed-interest paper will appreciate because the same scenario will cause problems for overextended companies. First-class government bonds is the message here.

Though impressed by the similarities between the 1980s and the 1920s. the Chase Manhattan soothsayers stop short at predicting another Great Depression. They also remain fairly equity-minded, in the light of falling energy and commodity prices and the rise in the real value of earnings as inflation drops.

If "it would be premature to conclude that the equity bull market the 1980s is complete," the preference is for financial assets rather than real assets like land, property and gold. And if the rapid expansion in credit is not likely to bring about an upturn in inflation in the near future. the preference if for bonds rather than :

Rebels with a just cause

Dr Maurice Gillibrand and Mr David Wilson have little in common other than a deep sense of grievance over the management and performance of the two companies in which they hold

This week, at separate meetings of the battery group Chloride and the engineering business 600 Group, they resumed what is becoming an annual pilgrimage to press for changes and extract explanations from the directors of these two companies.

So far their mission has apparently had little success. Predictably, when the counting takes place they are crushed by the weight of proxies cast in favour of the board. Their persistence in the face of sometimes downright hostility from directors and more often than not indifference among other small shareholders is all the more praiseworthy.

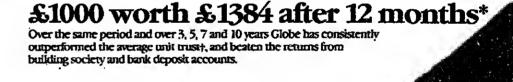

They also deserve credit for setting an example. When the the legendary apathy of small shareholders is sufficiently disturbed to query the board- and just.

room performance, how long overdue is the far more potent attention of, institutional shareholders? Many other companies spring to mind whose performance does little credit either to the board or to the shareholders who each year meekly approve the accounts without question.

What became apparent this week at both the Chloride and 600 Group meetings was how even the faint stirrings of revolt from the ranks can prompt boards into adopting a more frank and open attitude towards shareholders than they have shown in the past.

And while it is the weight of the behind-the-scenes lobbying from the big ' institutions which ultimately forces the pace of change, the highly public displays of dissatisfaction voiced at annual meetings provide awkward and uncomfortable occasions for directors called on to give a more openaccount of their stewardship.

The message is carry on Gillibrand and Wilson. Your cause is both timely.

The losers in the property boom

Building society mortgage ar-rears are running at record levels and in 1985 the societies foreclosed on 16,770 homes.

Repossession through the courts is their last and most drastic method of making bad debts good. And last year foreclosures were running at more than three times the rate than in the smaller home loan market of four years ago.

Almost a third of first-time purchases in the first quarter of this year have been financed by 100 per ceot loans. As nouse price increases outstrip wages, new buyers are bound to require more credit.

Interest rates are no looger quite so firmly set on the downward path. A sterling crisis on the foreign exchanges could push base (and mortgage) rates two points higher. Does this meao today's generous credit will be tomorrow's financial nibatross?

Not according to the huilding societies. Donald hirkham, of the Wootwich, and Jim Murgatroyd, of the Halifax, insist the twin causes of bad debts are unemploy ment or short-time working and marital break-np. Mark Boleat, of the Building Societies Association, says high prices are positively beneficia for borrowers in trouble: "If prices rise hy, say, 20 or 30 per cent, it's always easier to get out of the problem. You have the choice of taking some of the capital to fund the debt, or selliog and moving

For first-time buyers, how ever, the only option may be to move out of the market. Admittedly, a large proportion of the one in three who are hnying first time with a 100 per cent loan are buying artificially cheap property, such as council houses. Nevertheless, lenders must be careful oot to pay out too much

The difference between a loan of £30,000 and £35,000 can be the difference between a good borrower and a bad dehtor," says Mr kirkham. Mr Morgatroyd stresses the oced for a conservative view oo how much is lent in relation to

But how are first-time huyers to finance purchases in expensive markets such as the Sooth-East? The Sorrey three times joiot income, while the Halifax's nationwide norm is 2.1. If interest rates rise sharply the generous lender may discover how suddenly kindness can turn into cruelty.

If you are unable to meet your mortgage commitments, the advice from all societies is to see your building society manager right away. The sooner you deal with the problem, the more likely a

Franchise catastrophe

On Friday, November 15, 1985, the Young's Franchise Group went into receivership. Ten days later it was bought for £1.5 million by Cyril Spencer, former chairman of the Burton Group. Many franchisees of the La Mama division of Young's, which sold franchises in maternity wear shops, have lost their life savings and their homes and face hankruptcy. Their stories illustrate the dangers of franchising and of regarding the readiness of the banks to finance a franchisee as endorsement that the franchise is commercially sound. BEWARE! PENSIONS MINEFIELD 8met pension planning is a long-term business. MARTIN BAKER examines the case of one man who tried to make up for lost time and fell foul of the hidden charges

John Hatcher left it too late. He ran a microfilm processing business which, sadly, did not do well. One result was that for 12 years he made no contributions to a pension

When he stopped working for himself he was in his late fifties and realized he had left it very late indeed. He began to work for another company, Data Design, as a graphics manager, in November 1984. He was 58 and concerned about his pension arrangements. He asked for the first three months of his £15,000 salary to be put straight into a pension plan.

The company was small and had no pension arrangements, but Mr Hatcher learned that the chairman, Clive Holmes, had a knowledge of pensions. I left Mr Holmes in charge of things," says Mr Hatcher. A company scheme was established with Mr Hatcher as the sole subscriber.

After the first three months' salary had been paid in, Mr Hatcher committed £250 every month to the scheme. This was with Abbey Life, for which Mr Holmes had formerly been a salesman. During his 14 months of employment with Data Design. Mr Hatcher ploughed £6,790 into his pension scheme. "I was anxious to improve my inadequate pension arrangements," he wrote later to Abbey Life's chairman, Michael Hepber...

Data Design is no longer trading, and Mr Hatcher is out of a job. His pension scheme, however, still exists. Wheo its administrators wrote to Mr was surprised at what he considered to be a very low figure, and thought about transferring his money into another scheme run hy Lon-

Imagine his distress when he discovered that the transfer value of his £6,790 amounted to less than half of the premiums paid - £2,913.52. There are, of course, administrative costs in transferring the value of an employee's contributions between companies, and this diminishes the value transferred. Again, different actuarial assumptions may cause a lower value to be taken. But the figures, when quoted to Paul Stainbridge, of London & Manchester. sounded "ahsolutely amazing".

Mr Stainbridge said: "It sounds like a cierical error. Transfer values can carry penalties, but they run at 5 to 10 per cent in most cases. The ibscriber should at least have of his the value contributions. Was it a clerical error? If not where has the money gone? Some rapid checking-up showed that, in fact, only one of Mr Hatcher's two policies (a regular plan and a lump sum commitment for the first three mooths' salary) had been quoted. The true transfer value is £5,857.12 This is better, hut still £1,132.78 less than the amount contributed. A. pensioo scheme, for all the complications of tax breaks on contributions and the like, is oo more than an investment. Most of the money goes more or less directly into shares, property and other investments. That Mr Hatcher's money appears to have fallen io value by more than 16 per cent while the world's stock markets have been booming is, to say the least, surprising. For Mr Hatcher it is almost catastrophic.

His apparent losses are to be set against the managed pen-sion fund into which his mooey went. The fund has, according to Ahbey Life, gained 18.5 per cent per year for the past five years. We are Hatcher with an estimate of the money has gooe. The his pensioo oo retirement he answer is simple - commission to the salesman.

"We are not a charity," says Mr Hepher. It was the standard tale of the intermediary taking his share at the outset of the policies, and the pension company making its money over the duration of the plan.

"With any life assurance or pensions policy you'll be first couple of years," says Harry Verney, of Pensions Advisers, an independent pen- ... sions consultant. Some charges are levied early on io -are spread out over its duration. On early encashment or ... transfer the companies take their profit and the policyholder is left with the rest.

Mr Hepher insists that if Mr Hatcher chose "not to abandon the company, we could offer him an excellent return". But he added: "We cannot subsidize those who hreak with us at the expense of those clients who stay.

"This sort of charge is a normal life assurance iodustry ...

Mr Verney agrees. He finds the transfer value "a little on the low side, but not surprisingly so". Abbey Life is "io the lowest third of companies making charges, although middle market in terms of performance".

So where has Mr Hatcher gooe wrong? Mr Verney thinks he was wise to get ioto a " pension plan and pour in the ... money. The tax relief means Mr Hatcher would have seen .. about £4,000 of his £6,790. It : could be argued that be is, in fact, showing a profit. If the .: company had not ceased trading he would be taking advan- .. tage of the tax breaks without .suffering the high charges to. the early years. .

Mr Hatcher says: "As far as ! I'm concerned there are no early or late years - just five or six left." He is disappointed to have entered a scheme with heavy front-end charges.

Yet Abbey Life's charging structure seems more generous than most in an industry which seems to do very well out of the taxman's generosity : to pension subscribers.

industry is justified," says Mr . Hepher, "but some of it isn't ... The industry will be improved by competition."

120m2 04

Mr Hatcher's - practical problem now is whether to transfer to London Life or not.; If he does, there may be more : early charges - the standard practice in the industry. He is . taking independent advice this time. Undoubtedly. though, his biggest mistake was leaving it too late.

The leaseholders of Dunstable Marlow, House -Buckinghamshire, used to have a quiet life in their luxury block overlooking the Thames. But the past three years have seen harrowing legal battles which have left the leaseholders emotionally drained, and their freeholder more than £7,000 out of pocket.

Dunstable House consists of six flats on two floors. Each flat is worth about £100,000. In 1981 the leaseholders and the freeholder. Stanley Clarke, became aware that the root was in need of substantial repair or renewal.

The following year the freebolder built a penthouse oo 10 the roof, and at the same time he laid out the rest of the roof space as a patio garden and re-covered the roof. As early as July 1983 the residents were concerned about the standard of the repairs. Solicitors' letters started flying. Several of the leasebolders refused to pay their share of the cost of the repairs and they paid only part of the sum due for property insurance. In 1983 Mr Clarke started court proceedings agaiost one of them, a widow aged over 70. He sought to forfeit her lease for nonpayment of the amounts due. Her solicitor explained the outcome: "The freeholder was in America, and he did not give a good enough excuse for not coming back for the hearing. His application to forfeit the lease was dismissed, and the court held that he had overcharged on the insurance. Costs of £2,740 were awarded against Mr Clarke but he did not pay. The lessee's solicitor had to put a garnishee order on his bank account to recover the money. A month later the ceiling of about that the balcooy of one of the top . In fact, floor flats collapsed. James Robinson: chairman of the Dunstable House Residents! Association, said: "The ceiling materials crashed down."

The freeholder refused to accept that the roof was the cause of the problem. Meanwhile, water was penetrating into the flat below. In heavy rain, water came through the ceiling and the elderly flatowner had to catch the drips in bowls. In her flat and the flat above a black fungal substance appeared on the walls.

The leaseholders continually asked for repairs to the roof to be carried out, but the freeholder appeared to do nothing. Eventually one of the leasebolders, with the support of the residents' association, decided to go to the county court. She claimed Mr Clarke was in breach of his covenant to repair in the lease. The case was finally decided in February 1986. The leaseholder won the day. The judge said of Mr Clarke's evidence: "His claim of work done, unsupported by any docu-ments, was, to say the least, unconvincing. I find Mr Clarke not to be worthy of belief and I found his attitude in the witness box cavalier."

'Attitude in court was cavalier'

The leaseholder was awarded £200 towards the cost of redecorating her flat, and £500 general damages. Costs were again awarded against Mr Clarke. This time be is due to pay £4,538 in addition to his own legal fees.

The judge also appointed an independent receiver-manager to ensure that the roof repairs were carried out. The work is due to start oo Aogust

Mr Clarke is reluctant to comment but he insists: There is nothing wrong with the roof." When asked about the contractor who is due to start work oo the roof, he said:
"I do not know anything

In fact, Mr Clarke has acknowledged receipt of a letter from the receiver-manager which stated: "A contractor has been selected and August 11."

Just £500 nets you a big 8%.

If you leave your money in an Abbey National Higher Interest Account for a year, that 8% grows to 8.16%. This is the net compounded annual rate when your half-yearly interest remains invested.

Or you can take your interest as a monthly income.

We'll happily pay it into any one of several Abbey National accounts or your bank account.

INSTANT ACCESS

Should you need your money instantly, it's yours, subject to 90 days' loss of interest. Alternatively, give us 90 days' notice or leave a balance of £10,000 or more after withdrawal and you'll enjoy instant access without losing a penny. There's no limit to how much you invest. And getting Abbey National's Higher Interest couldn't be easier.

We've even provided a larger than average coupon for you to fill in.

Banks set to jump on the bandwagon

SHARES/1

The hig banks are beginning to warm to the idea of a shareowning democracy. Having noticed the huge response to the British Telecom issue they are now presumably expecting something similar with the flotations of the Trustee Savings Bank in September and British Gas in October.
The thought of all those nice dealing commissions just waiting to be picked up may not be making the banks drool, but they are clearly

Barclays was first off the mark, announcing that it has specially established a new Stock Exchange member com-pany. Barclayshare, to offer share-dealing facilities to the man in the street. National Westminster also intends to set up a share service, though more modestly to offer a special dealing facility in British Gas shares. Barclayshare will not become operational until Janu-ary when it will start offering a service for people investing in tax incentives being promoted hy the Government You will be able to invest regularly in your PEP, transferring money from your Barclays account to your Barclayshare account, and Barclayshare will look after the rest.

It will manage the share portfolio on a discretionary basis (it makes the investment decisions, not you) and will look after all the paperwork such as registering your holdings and keeping your share certificates safe.

The service will cost an annual management fee. Barclays is not disclosing exactly how much this will be yet, but promises that it will be competitive. Other details of the plan are also not available as the precise form of the PEP scheme will not be certain until legislation has brought them into existence.

Further into the future the bank will be offering a regular share-dealing service to customers — a pilot scheme in selected hranches is starting next year and the service may become nationwide by the end of the year. Barclays customers will be ahle to huy and sell shares over the counter in Barclays hranches, making their investment decisions themselves.

Again, Barclays will not say exactly what the commission charges will be but insists they however, will not be an-will be cheaper than its thorized to give advice. There present charges. In common with most other banks it

The road show for investors

British Gas is hitting the road. A huge publicity campaign has been set in motion for the November flotation of the company, involving television and newspaper advertising and 16 road shows. The intention is to bring the biggest government sell-off yet to our attention, whether we like it or not.

The road shows are aimed at professional advisers and intermediaries, while the public can call a share information office in Bristol or drop into their local gas showroom for a pack of information, including a brochure on British Gas, and a booklet on how to buy and

Furthermore, you will re-ceive a leaslet advertising the issue with your next gas bill. The leaflets are going out at the rate of quarter of a million

Once an inquiry has been made to the Bristol office the caller will automatically be sent further information on the flotation as it becomes available, and, when the time comes to huy (or not), a prospectus and application form.

But the advisers are keeping some matters fairly close to their chests. Although we know that British Gas employees will be able to purchase shares at a discount. and that gas consumers will receive favourable treatment, > regarded as a "consumer".

> Owner-occupiers with their names on the gas hill obvi-ously qualify for the privilege of a discount on bills or a bonus share issue. Tenants and those who share a gas supply may not be so lucky only one application per metered gas supply will receive the benefits.

If you decide to buy and sell straightaway you will certainly lose the right to any shareholder perks. As yet there are no details of how shares are to be bought and sold. The Post Office or even British Gas showrooms may or may not be involved. But dealing in the shares "will be quite easy", according to the merchant bankers responsible for the

But is it going to be a good investment? The balance of stockhroker opinion is favourable, although the nosedive in the price of oil has made many rather pessimistic about energy-related stocks.

The short and rather easy answer is that it is far too early to tell because of the large number of variables that influence the issue - the price of the shares, the state of the stock market and the future for oil all have to be considered.

The Government is trying to sell British Gas to more people than ever before. Brit-ish Telecom attracted 2.3 million subscribers, and the bankers behind the issue want to improve on that. It seems that if they want to make sure of that objective for such a hig company — it should bring in at least twice and possibly three times as much as BT the flotation will have to be

A telephone hotline will be set up at the Bristol informa-tion office this month. If you want information now, write to British Gas Share Information Office, PO Box 1, Bristol BS99 1BG.

Success in running PEPs and keeping costs to a mini-mum will depend very much on the right computer systems. Critics of the scheme have said the administrative costs and marketing charges would more than cancel out all the tax

"We already have the computer systems in place for PEPs and I believe we are better placed than any of our competitors to handle the administration," said Barry Bateman, Fidelity Investment Services managing director.

WORTH MAKING A SONG AND DANCE ABOUT.

At this rate, the new Alliance & Leicester Investment Bond will be a favourite for people on the lookout for a generous return on their money.

Especially as the minimum investment required is just £2,500.

The investment remains in the account for at least one year, during which it will certainly pay you handsomely.

Because no matter what future interest rates may be, during the first year of your investment the Bond guarantees to pay you annual interest at a level 3.25% above our basic rate.*

Alternatively, you can receive monthly income for the first year at a guaranteed 3% above our basic rate.*

Then, at the end of the year, you can have access to your money with only 28 days' written notice.

With such attractive terms as these, we hasten to add that the Alliance & Leicester Investment Bond is a limited issue.

Which means, of course, first come, first served.

So hurry along to any one of our 430 branches throughout the country or send off the coupon (no stamp needed) to Alliance & Leicester Building Society, FREEPOST, Hove Park, Hove, East Sussex BN3 2ZU.

Section 53(2) of the Children and Young Persons Act. as mended by section 2 of the Criminal Justice Act 1961, provides: "Where a child or young person is convicted on indictment of any offence punishable in the case of an adult with imprisonment for 14 years or more, not being an offence for which the sentence is fixed by law, and the court is of opinion that none of the other methods in which the case may be legally dealt with is suitable, the court may senience the offender to be detained for such period not exceeding the maximum term of imprisonment with which the offence is punishable in the case of an adult as may be specified

Mr F. J. Muller, QC, assigned by the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, for the appellant Jonathan Fairburst.

THE LORD CHIEF JUS-TICE said that cases involving sentences of detention under the 1933 Act and of youth custody under the 1982 Act had been isted for consideration.

Points of difficulty had arisen which their Lordships wished to try to resolve for the benefit of encing courts in the future. Three points were of particular importance: (1) the "14 years" requirement; 12) the requirement that no other method of disposal was suitable; and [3] the conviction had to be

Oakes on the one hand and Butlet on the other might have gone too far, each of them in opposite directions.

On the one hand there existed the desirability of keeping youths under the age of 17 out of ong terms of custody.

On the other hand it was that serious offences committed by youths of that age should be met with sentences sufficiently substantial to provide both the appropriate punishment and also the necessary deterrent effect and in certain cases to provide a measure of protection to the public. A balance had to be struck between those objectives. 1 It was not necessary in order invoke the provisions of

2 On the other hand, it was not good sectencing practice to pass a sentence of detention under section 53(2) simply because a 12 months youth custody sentence seemed to be on the low side for the particular fence committed.

3 Where the offence plainly called for a greater sentence than one of 12 months' youth custody and was sufficiently serious to call for a sentence of two years' youth custody or more had the offender been aged 17 or over, then it would be proper in sentence to a similar term of section 53(2) detention. If the offence would morit a sentence of less than two years but more than 12 months for an offender aged 17 or over, theo the sentence should normally be one of youth custody and not of section 53(2) detention. It could not be said that the difference between a sentence of, say, 21 months and one of 12 months' youth custody was so great that 12 months could be regarded as an inappropriate

Where more than one offence was involved for which section 53(2) detention was available but the offences varied significantly in seriousness, pro-vided that at least one offence was sufficiently serious to merit section 53(2) detention, detention sentences of under two years duration, whether concurrent or consecutive, might properly be imposed in respect of the other offences — see R v Gaskin

(11985) 7 Cr App R IS) 28). The next problem was where there were two offences committed by a 15 or 16 year old and one of them (A) carried a maximum sentence of 14 years and the other (B) carried a lower maximum, then generally speaking it was oot proper to detention to respect of offence A and [3] the conviction and indictment.

There were two poles of judicial opinion: R r Oakes [(1983) 5 Cr App R (S) 389) and R r Butler ([1984) 6 Cr App R (S) 389) and countered for offence B.

Where, however, it could truly be said that the offender's inhaviour giving rise to offence

Their Lordships had been particularly exercised by the desirability or otherwise of passing consecutive or concurrent sentences of section 53(2) detention and youth custody.

The difficulty arose where one of the offences carried a maximum penalty of 14 years or more but where the other carried a maximum penalty of less than 14 years or equally where the other offence came before the crown court on committal for sentence under section 37 of Magistrates Courts Act tences of section 53(2) detention and youth custody should be ed to run either consecutively to or coocurrently with each other - see Gaskin and R v McKenna ([1986] Crim LR It was not, bowever, always possible in avoid that. The only way out of the problem io general might be to impose no separate penalty for the offences for which section 53(2) detenion which section 53(2) deter-tion was not available.

Although that solution was not altogether satisfactory, it seemed to their Lordships that it provided fewer difficulties than other possible method. that was dooe and the offender successfully appealed against conviction on the count against conviction of the count carrying the section 53[2] deten-tion, he did not automatically walk free. That was by reason of section 4 of the Criminal Appeal

lo R v Dolan ((1976) 62 Cr App R 36, 39) the Court of Appeal held that where a conviction was quashed leaving io existence convictions on other counts in respect of which no penalty was imposed, the court was entitled under section 4(2) to pass such sentence as seemed to them appropriate on the latter counts.

Problems still would arise, however, where for example the convictions had been in respect of two separate indictments.

Finally, courts should be aware of an anomaly which existed in that area as to the extent to which time spent in custody on remand counted towards the eventual sentence. Some of those anomalies were set out in Home Office Circular 42 of 1983 paragraphs 25 and

Section 10 of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 extended to detention centre orders and youth custody sentences the provisions relating to imprisonment in section 67 of the Crimical Justice Act 1967, so that those custodial sentences were reduced by any period spent io custody in connection with the offence for which the sentence was passed. Those provisions did not, bowever, apply to sentences of detention under section 53(2).

What was withdrawn could only be interest and likewise LORD KEITH said that what could be accumulated at compound interest could only be interest. There could not possibly be any question of present regulated by the 1981 Act and by their rules. The depositors could have no rights accumulating at compound inother than such that were con-ferred upon them by the Act and terest any increment in the assets of the bank which could come about through capital the rules and such that they might have acquired by contract with the bank.

As regarded the latter, there was nowhere to be found any appreciation of investments in which it chose to invest its

He could not expect to receive some share, which it would be impossible to quantify in relation to the amount of his deposit, in any appreciation in the value of the assets of the bank which might have taken place during the currency of his deposit. Trustee savings banks had power to borrow money, which enabled the banks to earn revenue profits. To regard those profits as attributable in ascertainable shares to iodividual deposits was plainly out of the question.

The appellants disclaimed any suggestion that depositors might be entitled, upon with-drawal of their deposits while the bank was a going concern, to receive any share of the capital or revenue profits of the bank earned during the currency of particular deposits. But they maintained that such a right would arise upon closure of the bank and that the distribution would be an equal one.

But the notion of equal distribution was inconsistent with a depositor being entitled to the produce, whatever that might mean, of his own deposit.

Those considerations led to the irresistible conclusion that "produce" could only mean interest. Further, sections 20(1) and 21(1) contemplated that the aggregate of the sums owed by the bank to its depositors was to be ascertainable at any particular time and also that the bank could have assets of n value in excess of that aggregate amount.

Section 32 provided that when a bank was closed the present their surplus assets trustees were to pay over to the amounting, it was said, to £800

LORD TEMPLEMAN. agreeing, said that under the 1981 Act no depositor in a stalutory trustee savings bank was entitled to anything other than the return of his principal and contractual interest. That result was consistent with the legislation which in 1817 estab-lished statutory savings banks and with the legislation which had since then regulated their

No evidence had been pro-duced that, prior to the appeal, any depositor of a closed statutory savings bank had laid elaim in share in the surplus funds of Depositors who disapproved of the abolition of the statutory trustee savings banks by the 1985 Act were entitled to voice their disapproval and to mark their disapproval if they so wished by withdrawing their principal and interest from the principal and interest from the limited liability successor companies to which their deposits had been transferred by the Act. No one doubted the ability of the successor companies to meet their obligations to the depositors.

The appellants had pressed the emotive arguments that if the banks and their surplus assets were not "owned" by the depositors then the banks had oo owners and the surplus assets were in limbo. The arguments

The 1817 Act and its successors enabled savings banks to volunteer for and submit to nationalization upon filing their rules and claiming the benefits that decision.

The depositors at the date of the 1985 Act had no proprietary interest in the surplus assets of the banks and could not therefore complain of the transfer of those assets to the successor companies. Dealing with the cross-appeal, the theory that statutory savings banks beld their assets upon trust to provide for repayment of deposits was founded on the erroneous assumption that prior to the 1828 Act a depositor possessed some kind of eq-uitable interest in the assets of the savings bank.

A depositor after the 1820 Act and before the 1828 Act could hope to obtain at the discretion of the trustees additional interest or a capital bonus, but that depositor did not confer any equitable interest in assets on a depositor and did not apply to profits made after 1828.

Mr. Interior Scott had dis-profits made after 1828.

Mr Justice Scott had discerned differences between a statutory trustee savings bank and a clearing bank but be accepted that a depositor in a savings bank was entitled to no savings bank was entitled to no more than n depositor in a clearing bank, namely to a payment of principal and contractual interest. It would be strange if the same contractual right produced different proprietary rights.

The depositors' rights under the rules did not suffice to convert creditors into trust beneficiaries. The proposition that a statutory trustee savings bank beld its assets upon trust to repay its depositors would erete a new kind of floating charge bitherto unknown to the law and possessing unexplored incidents and priorities.

The transfer of the banks assets to a successor company under the 1985 Act did not interfere with any of the rights of the depositors.

If they dislike being depositors io a company bank as opposed to being depositors in a statutory trustee savings bank they had had full opportunity since the enactment of the 1985 Act to withdraw their deposits and they were at liberty to withdraw their deposits now. Lord Roskill, Lord Oliver and Lord Goff agreed.

Regina v Secretary of State for the Home Department and Another, Ex parte Greenwood Before Mr Justice Macpherson [Judgment given July 23]

Where a prisoner petitioned the Secretary of State for the Home Department for an order producing him at a court to conduct litigation which be had commenced, it was not un-reasonable for the secretary of state to refuse to order his production on the ground that the prisoner had no funds to pay for the cost of his transport in advance.

Mr Justice Macpherson so held in the Queco's Bench Division dismissing an applica-tion for judicial review by Ian Greenwood, a prisoner at Gartree Prison, of the decision of the Home Secretary and the prison governor dated Septem-ber 4, 1985, whereby they refused to order his production at Daventry Magistrates' Court on September 5, 1985, to enable him to conduct his private prosecution of a police constable on a charge of assault.

His Lordship refused to quash the decision or to grant the applicant a declaration that in deciding whether to produce the applicant at a court to pursue civil or criminal litigation, the question whether the applicant was willing and able to pay for the costs of his production in advance was an irrelevant consideration.

Mr Tim Owen for the ap-plicant: Mr Nigel Pleming for the secretary of state and the governor.

MR JUSTICE MAC-PHERSON said that the applicant was serving a nine-year sentence of imprisonment at Gartree Prison. While on re-mand at Bedford Prison in 1985 he commenced a private prosecution against a police constable for an assault.

The case was due to come on at Daventry Magistrates' Court on March 26. On March 18 be petitioned the secretary of state for an order for his production at the court but was told. orally. that he would have to bear the cost himself in advance unless an escort was coincidentally travelling there.

applicant that the secretary of state's decision was unreason-able and therefore unlawful in that it impeded the applicant's access to the court in breach of his right of unimpeded access.

It was true that a convicted prisoner retained all those com-mon-law rights which were not

Jones v Roberts Before Lord Justice Parker, Lord Justice Nourse and Sir Roger Ormrod [Judgment given July 18]

The power conferred by Order 62, rule 7[5] of the Rules of the Supreme Court las it was before the Rules of the Supreme Court [Amendment] [SI 1986 No 632 [L2]) came into force on April 28), to award a "nominal or other sum" for costs to a party who had failed to procure or to proceed with taxation, could be exercised where taxation had in fact been initiated. or proceeded with, provided that it could be shown that there had been delay in procuring or proceeding with taxation which had caused prejudice to the party against whom costs had been awarded. Where the delay had been such that in the opinion of the taxing officer it had rendered fair taxation impossible, it was not necessary for specific prej-udice to be established before the power could be exercised. The Court of Appeal so held in a reserved judgment, allowing an appeal by the defendant. Mr Paul Roberts, from Mr Justice Evans who, on July 1, 1985, had granted an application by the plaintiff, Elizabeth Anne Jones, under Order 62, rule 35 for review of Mr District Registrar Freeman's decision in 1984 to allow her only nominal costs (£5) in respect of an action in which she had obtained judgment in early 1981.

Mr Duncan Matheson for the defendant: Mr Alexander Carlile. QC and Mr P. Michael Former for the plaintiff.

LORD JUSTICE PARKER said that Drake & Fletcher Ltd v Clark 1(1968) 112 SJ 95) was direct authority for the applica-

Court in cases where taxation was instituted or continued with only after inordinate and in-excusable delay and that delay had prejudiced the paying party. In Chapman r Chapman (1985) I WLR 599, 603-4) Sir Robert Megarry, Vice-Chancellor, had expressed doubts about the correctness of Drake,

Drake had been decided per incurium, since it did not appear that the application of the rule that the application of the role had been seriosuly argued.

That was an insufficient reason for the Court of Appeal refusing to follow its own previous decision [see Morelle Ltd v Wakeling ([1955] 2 QB 379), and the court was therefore bound to follow Drake, about which his Lordship had no

and in the light of that the plaintiff had submitted that reluctance. The fact that the rule spoke of failure rather than delay was of no significance. If a party did nothing for two years the paying party seeking to invoke the rule could properly say that the other had failed to initiate or procure or commence taxation. If in response the other were galvanised into action he would require an extension of time, until he obtained which he would still bave failed. Were it otherwise the remarkable result would be that a party entitled to taxation could in all cases avoid the operation of the rulc. A party, having done nothing for ten years, could give nothing for ten years, could give notice of intention to proceed, seek extension of time and, when faced with a counter-application under Order 62, rule 7(5), could say. "I have not failed to procure taxation. Here Neither rule 8(6) nor rule 7/41 prejudice to the defendant of Order 62 indicated that rule

7(5) was not intended to be used in cases of delay; they were concerned with disallowing concerned with disallowing costs in the taxation in the event of delay, whereas rule 715) gave the additional power to disallow costs in the action to prevent prejudice to any other party.

Treasury Solicitor.

Drake & Fletcher Ltd r Clark had been cited in successive editions of the Supreme Court Practice ever since it bad been decided. That was of itself a good reason not to depart from it. since where a decision had stood and been acted upon by practitioners for a long period it ought not to be departed from without compelling reason, especially when it acted as a powerful incentive to practitioners to conduct their affairs with reasonable speed.

The administrative machin-ery under which the Supreme Cours offices sent the perfected order on the trial of an action. and a copy, to the appropriate district registry did not effect the beginning of taxation proceedings for the purpose of Order 62, rule 21(1); the party entitled to taxation must always initiate it. The only substantial question before the district registrar on application under Order 62, rule 7(5) had been the extent, if any. to which specific prejudice had to be established to warrant an under the rule. The registrar, having been referred to Drake and Pamplin v Fraser (No 2) [[1984] | WLR 1385), had decided that, although there was no affidavit evidence of specific prejudice, the delay of nearly two years in this case, which the plaintiff had not suggested to be other than are and inexcusable, was in itself bound to bave caused In Chapman, the Vice-Chan-

erences in Pamplin to delay which sufficed to establish prejudice as referring only to cases where delay had made it impos-sible to adduce evidence of prejudice and not as entitling a paying party to refrain from adducing such evidence and to rely on prejudice being inferred from mere delay. In his Lordship's judgment a delay could be so prolonged that the inference could be drawn, at least prima facie, that no fair taxation could be held. If, for example, there had been a fiveyear delay, it was not necessary for the paying party's solicitor to depose that he could not remember the details as well as he could have done five years previously, although it would be open to the party entitled to taxation to displace the in-ference, for example, by show-ing that memory was

Where an experienced taxing officer considered, as he had here, that a proper taxation was impossible, there was no reason demand any evidence of specific prejudice. Moreover, it should be borne mind that a party who had failed to institute taxation, or having done so had failed to proceed, would require an exercise of discretion before he could proceed at all.

Where the delay was prolonged and inexcusable, there was no reason why an extension of time should not be refused. The applying party would then be in mercy and have to satisfy the taxing officer that he should be allowed to proceed.

It was for the party seeking to rely on Order 62, rule 7(5) to satisfy the taxing officer that if the taxation proceeded nor-mally there was a substantial risk that a fair and just result would not be achieved. If that were shown, it did not follow that nominal costs only should be awarded, since the power was to award a nominal "or other sum". That required the taxing officer to consider whether a larger than nominal sum could be awarded without causing prejudice.

Prejudice could be avoided if the taxation proceeded on the basis that the party entitled should be allowed only such sum as would inevitably have been allowed on a taxation in a case of its type, bearing in mind the time taken to try the case and assuming that proceedings had been commenced and conucted expeditiously.

If the paying party paid only such a sum he would not be prejudiced if the only prejudice on which he relied was inability properly to challenge the other party's bill. On the other hand, if the paying party's financial po-sition bad deteriorated, as had been the situation in Drake, that approach might be insufficient to prevent prejudice.

The judge, on the plaintiff's application under Order 62, rule

35, had erred in concluding that no prejudice had been shown. This was an appropriate case for exercising the rule 7(5) power.

The rule was not intended to punish the dilatory but to prevent prejudice to the paying party. On that footing an award of a nominal sum only was not justified. The appeal should be allowed and the application provided for the district presisted. remitted for the district registrar to consider what "other sum" to allow, looking at the bills if be thought that they would assist

Lord Justice Nourse and Sir Roger Ormrod agreed. Solicitors: Garrard Mitchell & Shrewsbury, Harrison & Welshpool.

Cowes weak and not so sacred any more

The first Saturday of August and yachting traditionalists have their oilies, tan slacks and blazers packed for the annual pilgrimage to "Sacred Cowes" - the country's largest and most prestigious Week.

This year the entry list of more than 550 yachts is well down on previous years and the Cowes Combined Clubs, the organizers of this "Royal Week", sponsored this year by Sandhurst Marketing, are left to wonder what can be done to > shoulders with royalty and the famous in the heyday of Cowes Week was enough to persuade anyone of social standing to swallow their Kwells and cross the Solent to Queen Victoria's favourite hauot. Today it is the standard than half the size of last year's of racing that counts, not the fleet — a poor turnout even io mix of the Martinis later, and oon-Admiral's Cup years — after a series of unfortunate and with a similar deteriorabreaks with the weather in tion among other classes, recent years the new breed of other than the Channel professional amateurs" have Handicap fleet (78 strong sailed off in search of more against 60 competing in the

The chance of rubbing at the seams with the lenge and Cowes was hursting Admiral's Cup overshadowing the traditional Week. The 60 to line up for yesterday's 210-mile Channel Race to France and back, the customary opener to Cowes Week, is by comparison less demanding challenges.

When faced with a similar premier 10R divisions), something has to be door to commodores of the Royal clice.

One radical suggestion find-

The plan is to hold the Admiral's Cup inshore races during the days preceding. Cowes Week, then send the three-boat teams on a special Fastnet course of their own during the opening weekend of Cowes, giving these inter-national crews the chance to return midway through the Week in time to compete for the New York Club Challenge

There is no doubt that the traditional 605-mile sailor's Everest out to the Fastnet Rock and back to Plymouth. which has attracted more than 300 entries io the past, would provide fresh impetus for foreign crews to return to Cowes in the non-Admiral's Cup year. But while the idea is gaining widespread support here some competing nations io the Admiral's Cup are less enamoured of the prospect.

An Australian competitor, Peter Kurts, a member of the Admiral's Cup management committee, voices another side to the argument. Speaking from Brisbane this week, he said: "One of the reasons we cart our boats and crews halfway round the world every other year is the prospect of winning the Fastnet. To separate the Admiral's Cup from this race and Cowes Week would be a tragedy."

Circumstances suggest a bat-tle royal at the Shell Oils British motorcycle grand prix tomor-row. At least six riders have a chance of victory on the long and merciless straights of this

Northamptonshire airfield circuit, where races are often decided only on the final bend.

As local police made unprecedented security arrangements, including closing local pubs, in preparation for the Invasioo of the often rowdy leather-clad army of fans, practice started yesterday, dominated as usual by the battle between the works

teams of the Honda and

There is a champiooship at stake as well. For this reasoo

Eddie Lawsoo may settle for caution. The most successful rider in a year that saw Freddie

Spencer, the reigning champion, drop out, he has scored five victories in eight races and need finish only in the top four to preserve his championship lead.

But the Marlborough-Yamaha rider has different ideas.

"Silverstone is a really big race for me, and I mean to win."

His rivals include Wayne Gardner on the V4 Rothmans Honda. The Australian, who is based in the United Kingdom, was fastest yesterday morning. Although the fierce character of the power makes his Honda difficult on slower circuits, he thinks Silverstone will give him a chance to use his top speed

The third joint favourite is Randy Mamola, twice a winner here. His Lucky Strike Yamaha effort has gained momentum, and he is second overall.

The remaining Yamaha riders

all have a chance of victory: Christian Sarron on the French

Wembley prepares to stage American Bowl

After a week of bone-crusching workouts, the Chicago Bears are ready to play the Dallas Cowboys before 80,000 supporters at Wembley tomorrow in the American Bowl '86. Chicago, the Super Bowl champions, will be led by the flumboyant quarterback, Jim McMahon, running back, Walter Payton, and defensive tackle, William "the Refrigerator" Perry. Dallas, who have played in five Super Bowls in the space of 20 successful seasons, are led by the powerful running back Tony Dorsett. As testament to the increasing popularity of gridinon football in Britain, tickets were sold out shortly after going on sale by mail-order in April. The game, which starts at 6 pm, will the started lime in the United game, which starts at 6 pm, will be televised live in the United States and Channel 4 will broadcast highlights tomorrow and Monday. The sides offer contrasting approaches to the game. Cow-boys are a state-of-the-art, high-tech team, relying on computer analysis and sophisticated psychological testing in the search for the best players in college ranks. The Bears, founder members of the Na-tional Football League more than 60 years ago, pay heed to high-tech but rely heavily on an aggressive, take-no-prise style.

Chicago trounced Dallas last season 44-0 — but then, the Bears were virtually nabeatable en route to the Saper Bowl title. Their defence is the best in the NFL but crucial to the outcome will be control of the line of scrimmage. The linemen, who weigh on average in excess of 18 stones, usually determine the success or failure of the plays. The Bears have the biggest of them all in Perry, who became an international celebrity in his first professional season last-year. As the game tomorrow is an official NFL pre-season match, all the players will be battling to win coveted regular positions. A danger man for the Bears is the blazingly quick Willie Ganlt, wide receiver, but special attention should be paid to Payton, aged 32, who draws an annual salary of $1 million. He is the most prolific running back in the history of the game. Phenomenally durable, he has missed only one game through injury in cleven seasons. Turner bursts ahead with a course record

Ulina (Reuter) - Greg Turner, of New Zealand, broke out of the pack yesterday to take a one-stroke lead with a course record 10-under-par 62 in the second round of the Scandinavian Open golf championship.

In a spectacular round, Turner, the brother of former Test cricket captaio Glenn, scored one eagle, eight birdies and nice pars to break the previous record by one shot. "It was my best round ever, a near flawless round," said Turner, who hooed his game playing college golf in the United States for four years.

Today he goes into the third round on 131, 13 under par, with a one-shot lead over former U.S. Masters champion Craig Stadler (66) and Ian Baker-Floch (67), of Australia. Ronan Rafferty had a 66 to take fourth place on 133, while former Open champion Sandy Lyle slipped to eighth place with a 71...

Maysoon is a confident choice to continue Michael Stoute's record-breaking season by winning the Vodafone Nassau Stakes on the closing afternoon of Goodwood's five-day summer festival. Both Midway Lady and Sonic Lady have continued to emphasize the excellence of this year's crop of three-year-old fillies and Maysoon can now carry on the good work.

After winning Newbury's Fred Dar-ling Stakes and finishing second in the 1,000 Guineas, Mbysooo was sent to Epsom, where she was third to Midway Lady and Untold. A furlong and a half from home backers of Walter Swinhurn's mount were already counting their winnings, so easily was the filly travelling. But her stamins then gave out as Midway Lady swept to victory.

Park Express has always been held in high regard by Jim Bolger, and she justified her trainer's faith in no uncertain fashion when beating Mill On The Floss and Santiki in the Lancashire Oaks at Haydock, Stamina is obviously her strong suit and the Irish-trained filly could be the one to exploit any chink in the favourite's armour.

Of the other runners, Asteroid Field ran well when second to Maysoon at Newbury but disappointed in the Oaks. English Spring ran the race of her life when beating Bedtime at Ascot but has subsequently preformed indifferently in subsequently performed indifferently in Ireland. Dick Hern's Cocotte won a Bath maiden by 10 leogths, but would have to show dramatic improvement to trouble Maysoon, who is the subject of glowing reports from Newmarket.

The Racal Chesterfield Cup looks certain to be a far more keenly contested affire. King's Head, the top weight, ran a storming race for Guy Harwood when third from an impossible draw 10 Patriarch in the Royal Hunt Cup. Patriarch confirmed the excellence of that form in his subsequent win in the Banbury Cup and King's Head is sure to make a bold bid despite his ioevitable rise in the weights.

No-one has a better record io big handicaps this season thao Patriarch's trainer, John Dunlop, Sultao Mohamed, the Arundel handler's candidate oo this occasion, is clearly a progressive three-year-old and looks reasonably treated for his venture in this kind of company. The evergreeo Mailman, Albert Hall and Master Line are others with obvious chances bot King's Head gets the vote.

The afternoon starts with the Berkshire Electronic Maideo Stakes. Here my best advice is for Henry Cecil's candidate, Kristal Rock, a chestnut colt by Kris, who is a grandsoo of the 1,000 Guioeas and Oaks winner, Altesse Royale. Other likely winners on the Sussex track are Roysia Boy, Gaelic Flutter and Island Set.

Roysia Boy has been working his way down the handicap and oow looks weighted to beat Manimstar and Lonely Street in the Albert Stakes. Gaelic Flutter, recently a comfortable winner of a Wolverhampton handicap for Kim Brassey, should find Codices and Local Silver to be his principal opponents in the Surplice Stakes. And Island Set. runner-up to the progressive Albert Hall at Haydock looks as though his winning turn may have arrived in the Trundle

Newmarket features the Colman of Knowledge Stakes and the Mail on Sunday three-year-old handicap. No less than five of those declared for the sponsored nursery were successful last time out and Panache was also first past the post at Leicester before being disqualified and placed third. However Peter Easterby's southern raiders are always to be feared and Full Of Pride, an easy winner at Newbury before finishiog runner-up to Ongoing Situation at Pootefract, appears to be on an appealing mark.

By Christopher Goulding The proper sport, National Hunt racing, is back with us today with meetings taking place at Newton Abbot and Market Rasen. The prize money might not amount to much, but the enthusiasm will be brimming from all quarters.

This year the jockeys' championship is a wide open contest. Peter Scudamore, the champion last season, rode only 91 winners, the lowest figure for 11 years. This emphasized that the share of winning mounts are the share of winning mounts are becoming more evenly spread, due to the retirement of Jahn Francome, who dominated the championship for seven seasons. Phil Tuck, who will be first jockey to the Pemrith trainer. Gordon Richards, this year, has the right stable behind him to become a champion jockey. The last time the championship was won by a northern-based rider was in 1979/80, when the now retired John O'Neill collected the title. Richards said: "If I have a good season Phil will have a good season Phil will become the champion." Rich-ards has helped in the past his former stable jockeys, Ron Barry and John O'Neill, to win he championship. Tuck, who has already shows his prowess as a top class jockey when winning the Cheltenham Gold Cup on Burrough Hill Lad, said yesterday: "I am looking forward to the new season; Gordon has a lot of ammunition. At the moment I am still living at Ampleforth in Yorkshire, but I soon expect to move closer to the stables. I will continue to ride for Mick Easterby, who I ride out for most mornings. At Newton Abbot Martin Pipe, the leading trainer numerically with 79 winners last season, can open his account. Pipe has three runners at the meeting, and his best hopes lie with Hever in the Dimplex Selling Hurdle. John Jenkins, who always has his stable geared for the water next heart learning.

final with White

After a morning of total upbeaval, the English Amateur

Championship was bound to suffer from lack of atmosphere

when the semi-finals were played in dripping rain yes-terday, at Hillside, Southport. With the big guns silent, Bernard White, the Surrey

Champion, and Jonathan Langmead, of Newton Abbot, came through to face each other over 30 boles today. White beat Wayne Henry (Porters Park) by three and one and Langmead (Stnver) beat Robert Bardsley (Denton) by nne hole,

Henry, for all his tender years the is still only aged 16) seemed likely to be a prominent figure today, but he could never find his true form and after a taut struggle. White ran away to win four holes in a row from the fourteenth pointout having to do

The feeling that small countries within the Commonwealth Federation should be encouraged may favour Car-diff in their bid to get the 1994 Games, in preference to the five potential Canadian candidates. There is a reluctance to pass the privilege around among the five main white countries in the sbsence of a capable city from Africa or Asia. Ron Watkiss, the Tory chairman of Cardiff council, believes they can already count on 15 of the 28 votes they would need in Seoul in 1988.

Cardiff is politically united, like Birmingham for the Olympics, in its attempt. Lord Brooks, a life-long socialist, has promised to raise £40,000 towards the promotion of the bid, and s key factor could be the promise by James Callaghan, a former prime minister, to bring to bear such influence as he can within Africa. "We are a one-party state" Lord Brooks jests.

Watkiss, with plans already underway for a new sthletics stadium on the other side of the road from Ninian Park, the home of Cardiff City, has been planning the campaign for over two years, visiting Brisbane last year. He thinks Edinhurgh's problem has been that they looked back to their success of 1970 rather than forward; and that, as has already been said many times. their view was parochial rather than international.

It has not, after all setbacks of boycotts, intimidating Scottish weather and widespread inefficiency, been a bad Games as seen by the public. The proliferation of mistakes have largely been evident only to competitors, officials and journalists. The public, as it always will, has responded to some excellent finals on the track, in badminton, rowing and cycling. There has been plenty to see, in spite of diminished heats, and the stadia have been nearly full.

It was a pity about the absence of Coe, but we shall remember famous names like de Castella, Johnson, Cram, tries like Mexico and Redgrave and Sze Yuand Colombia" he says. Newnes's magnificent competitors who father was captain of the first did not win but set the tone into appearing passive. As a result the Englishman was given two formal cautions — a third would have brought instant Keeping cool, however, Loban took over tactical command. With two minutes to go, and five clear points ahead, he let the Canadian take a point as the time ebbed away, and the title came closer. With 20 seconds to Aggresssive Baddeley's gold raid came closer. With 20 seconds to go, the Canadian gained one more point, but it was too little too late.

Brian Aspen, who failed to retain his 57kg title, gained some consolation when he beat Paul Nedley, of Scotland, 12-2 to take the bronze. Having done so, he then announced his retirement from competition to concentrate on coaching. Two others to announce their retirement are Dave Kilpin (100kg) and Keith Peache (130kg), who

Dyer and Rod Douglas though they may not of course go to Lawless. Dyer is expected to be signed by Mickey Duff, a matchmaker and a close associate of

Dyer's contest with James Macallister, of Scotland, lasted just one minute 22 seconds. The first solid right hand on McAllister's head split his teft eyebrow. The refereee took McAllister over to the doctor who had no heatting in the second. who had no besitation in stop-ping the bout, much to the disgust of the Scottish crowd who loudly cheered every move of McAllister, however trivial, to the rafters. It was Dyer's tenth inside the distance win in eleven

Douglas, at middleweight, fieured in the most exciting contest of the night beating Jeff Harding, of Australia, on an ananimons decision, Dangtas, scorning defence, went all out to scorning defence, went all out to swamp Harding with two handed hooks. Moran receives timely bonus

Jim Moran, of England, who last night added the Commonwealth Games light-heavy-weight gold medal to his ABA light-heavyweight title, has been named in a list of 65 British sportsmen and women representing nine sports who will receive grants totalling £68,000 under a Minet awards

On hearing the news, Moran said this could not have come at a better time. I have been out of work since Christmas and this is the first time I have had any financial help with my boxing".

Two other England boxers at the Games are also to receive grants. John Lyon, flyweight, and Sean Murphy, bantamweight, stopping Leonard Makhanya, of Swaziland, Lyon boxed smartly, He stood out of the way of Makhanya's right hand that knocked out kerry Webber, of Wales. Lyon moved in and out with well-timed punches scoring with both hands and though in the second round Makhanya did catch the Englishman with two quick left hands Lyon shrugged them nff and knocked him to the floor with a left.

Sean Murphy gave England another gold when he stopped Roy Nash, of Northern Ireland. in the third round. Murphy never let Nash get his boxing going and floored him.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

But the night's highlight, which had the Meadowbank Sports Centre applauding for two minutes afterwards, was the straight-games win for Billy Gilliland and Dan Travers, of Scotland, in the men's doubles final that and Keith Peache (130kg), who both bowed out in style with a hronze medal apiece. There is little doubt, though, that these Games will be remem-

Games in Edinhurgh, and not just because of the miserable weather. England won a silver through Colin Sturgess, aged 17, of Leicester, in the 4,000 metres individual pursuit early in the week and a bronze in the 4,000 metres team pursuit on Thurs-day. Scotland won a bronze through Eddie Alexander, of Inverness, in the sprint.

Three medals from the United Kingdom is not too much to shout about when compared to the brillians Australian team who made a clean sweep of all five track gold medals and threw in a silver and won the sprint; Wayne McCarney snatched the 10 mile championship and they easily took the 4.000 metres team ing in and out of the rain than in riding round the 250 metres track. It made a mockery of much of the proceedings, though the Australians, for one,

one fact was clear. Never again a velodrome without a roof The cyclists spent more time dodg-

Troubles left behind by de Castella

Robert de Castella, of Australia, became the first man successfully to defend a Commonwealth marathon tithe yesterday, while his compa-triot, Lisa Martin, woo the inaugural women's race in a

For de Castella the race ultimately proved less of a problem than the one he encountered two weeks ago when he was almost banned from the Australian team in a move which, he claimed yes-terday, "would have had repercussions up to govern-

De Castella, who, like Mrs Martin, is based in the United States, wanted to compete in a road race in Kansas on July 12. The Australian athletics authorities told de Castella, however, that as a team member he was contracted to artend a match against Belgium and England Under-23 in Brussels the following day. If he were not present, he was told, he would be dropped from the team.

De Castella, who also holds the world's fastest marathon time this year with the 2hr 7min 51sec he set in Boston in April, said yesterday: "What upset me most was that several of the team members were prepared to vote against me as well. There are still people annoyed at the idea of somebody making money out of the

In the event, de Castella ran the 10km race in the United States, finishing second to Britain's John Doherty, and -caught a succession of connecting flights."in order to arrive in Belgium at ten the next morning and sit and watch the match in the

Yesterday, his problems be-hind him, de Castella took an series of surges which even-nually got rid of his last opponent, John Graham of Scotland, by 17 miles. The Australian's victory was such that he was able to look around and relax in the final stages and enjoy his victory.

More Games reports and results, Page 30

The five mile 'splits' were indicative of de Castella's domination of the race. He led every one of them, clocking 24min 24sec, 49.27, 1hr 13min 37sec, 1:38.31 and 2:04.05. The cheer when he came into the stadium to win by almost a minute in 2:10.15 was, to put it mildly, in distinct contrast to the reception the Prime Minister had ot when she took her seat an hour earlier.

Despite his insistence on staying in Kansas to run his money race, de Castella knows his priorities He said: 'lt's just not satisfying enough to win the hig money races and not win the championships as well." His only championship setback since he won the same title in Brisbane and the world title in Helsinki in 1983, was to finish fifth in the 1984 Olympic Games. His immediate plan is to race in New York in October and then begin preparation for next year's World Championships in Rome, and the next Olympic

The challenge that everyone expected from Charlie immediate lead, putting in a series of surges which even-nually got rid of his last Olympic bronze medal winner, was, like many unsuccessful marathon runners, at a loss to explain why he felt so bad that he dropped out after 20 miles. He said: "My preparation had gone as well as for any marathon. I felt good enough to beat Deke, and at worst I thought I'd finish

> Dave Edge, former Black-pool and Fylde club member, now running for Canada, was second in 2:11.08, taking two seconds off his previous best time, while a surprising third was another Australian, Steve Moneghetti, running his first marathon. Moneghetti, fifth in the 10,000 metres last Saturday, only decided to apply for the vacant marathon place three months ago, and only lost the silver medal to Edge in the last 400 metres on

> Mrs Martin's victory in 2:26.07, also a personal best. was even more decisive than that of de Castella. She had decided the night before that the last thing she should do was to lead at any stage before the last couple of miles — the aim was to leave the incentive to Lorraine Moller, of New Zealand, who has beaten Mrs Martin consistently in the past. The Australian, in fact, led from the start, moving immediately away from Miss Moller and increasing her lead throughous to win hy more two minutes, Miss Moller was second in 2:28,17 and Odette Lapierre, of Canada,

Graham Walker, president

Cup contender Indulgence
from the Channel Race hours before the start at Cowes last night because his yacht did not have a valid rating certificate.

The 210-mile Cowes Week opener also forms the final selection trial for the British Threequarter-Tnn Cup team and, having also missed the first missore trial last weekend, Walker's yacht may now be discounted for a place in the British team — despite having wnn four of the six inshore

A disappointed Walker ex-plained yesterday that a rating check made on his yacht two weeks ago indicated that the Andrien design measured 0.1 feet, higher than the Threequarter Ton limit, which he thought was caused by the changes in the method of measuring the yacht's inclina-tion factor.

Last weekend the skipper agreed to have 40kg removed from the yacht's keel to rectify the discrepancy but since then the winds have been too strong for a further inclination test to

The selectors, who are due to announce Britain's 10-boat team for the world championship on Monday, are faced with the dilemma of either using their discretionary pow-ers to include Walker and his crew in the line-up or discard this top cap contender, leaving the French an opportunity to charter her for their team.

England job in Australia for Stewart

By John Woodcock, Cricket Correspondent

Australia next winter will be captained by Mike Gatting and managed by Peter Lush, Public Relations and Market-ing manager of the Test and County Cricket Board. The assistant manager will be Micky Stewart and the physiotherapist Laurie Brown. In other words, the conservatives with the TCCB have won the day, though for the first time the assistant manager's role has been defined in writing.
In announcing the four
chairman of the board.

stressed that the captain, and no one else, would be in charge of the cricket. Because this is considered fundamental to the success of the England team, both at home and away, a football-style "supremo" has not been ap-pointed. David Brown. Warwickshire's cricket manager, and Ray Illingworth were both asked how they saw the assistant manager's joh, but only Stewart was offered it.
After the tour has been reviewed next Spring, and if both sides so wish it. Stewart could again be offered a two or three year contract carrying with it the title of team manager. The party's fitness, their practice arrangements and day-to-day discipline will be his special responsibility in Australia. As a member of the tour committee he will also be a selector.

As the senior officers Messrs Gatting, Lush and Stewart are obviously of less fame and experience than some of their predecessors: Jardine, Warner and Palairet in 1932-33 for example, or Peter May. Freddie Brown, return after the matches at Desmond Eagar and George Duckworth (baggage master)

The England team in gland B side to Sri Lanka last winter, is a specialist in public relations. He went to Lord's as one of the TCCB's assistant secretaries in 1974. He is 47 and was previously in advertising. Stewart, who is 53, has been cricket manager of Surrey since 1979. He toured India with the MCC side of 1963-64 and has taken two Surrey youth sides to Australia. His son, Alec, is one of several promising young cricketers coming through at the Oval.

While Messrs Lush and Stewart were meeting the press at Lord's yesterday evening. Garting was elsewhere in the pavilion helping to choose the England team for next week's second Test match against New Zealand amid rumours that David Gower was to be given a rest. If so, the timing of it will be profoundly ironic, for it was he who fought hardest of all to get Gatting to India two years ago. Gaiting. I am sure, would not have wanted to drop him now, but although he will be able to get his way in Australia over matters such as that, at the moment he is only one of five selectors.
